Coe says illness may end career

By David Miller

Sebastian Coe, middle distance record-breaker extraordinary, is to be admitted to an attempt to resolve the crisis which has brought his career to an abrupt, traumatic halt and answer the medical question, is he running badly because he is ill, or is be ill simply because he runs? Only when he has been given a satisfactory answer will be be able to decide whether he will again subject his body to the endlessly rigorous demands of a world class athlete's training and whether he will continue in and whether he will continue in the sport he has dominated for the past four years through to next year's Olympic Games. Only then will we know if we are ever to see him one of the most graceful runners of all time, in action again.

Endocrinology as yet has no certain knowledge of the effect upon the human glandular ses, muscular and chemical, created by the training schedules over many years of a runger such as Coe or Steve Ovett. In the past athletes such as David Bedford, John Walker and Alberto Juantorena have suffered muscle break-downs, while many runners iustain stress fractures. Yesterday, bracing himself against the collapse of his ambition to win a major 800 metres championship, and the disintegration of two years' dedicated work since his record-breaking spree of 1981, Coe told me:

Coe tolo me:

"I am only a year away,
optimistically, from another Olympic final. I have to get to the bottom of this if I am ever to run seriously again. "It seems that something is working through my system related to stress. I need the doctors to tell me why.

"If they can, then hopefully my future is OK. But if not, there is no way I am again going to leave the country next January for three months, give six solid months of my life to running free of every other consideration, and then find myself on the wrong end of the life cycle of a virus on some particular day in Los Angeles just when I need to be at a

Glue-sniff charges challenged

Two brothers accused of endangering children's lives by selling them glue-sniffing kits yesterday challenged the charges n a test case in the High Court in Edinburgh. Khaliq Raja, aged 23, and Ahmed Raja, aged 28, of Boilton Drive, Glasgow, who run a shop in Salt Market, Glasgow, are accused of culpable and reckless conduct.

. It is alleged that, over two years, they supplied at least 18 children aged between 8 and 15 with solvents, particularly glue, and containers such as crisp packets or plastic bags for inhalation.

It is further alleged that they knew the children intended to inhale the solvents and that they therefore caused or procured inhalation by the chil-dren. They are also charged with receiving stolen goods from nine of the children in exchange for solvents.

They are due to stand trial in the High Court in Glasgow on September 19, but today's preliminary hearing was to decide whether the trial will go

Lord McCluskey, QC, for Khaliq Raja, said the main charge disclosed no crime known to the law of Scotland. A solvent was not an illegal or controlled substance, he said.

But Lord Mackay, the Lord Advocate, said: "The point in this case is that the Crown are undertaking to prove the supply was for the purpose of inhaling solvents which causes danger to health and life. That is a crime known to the law for Scotland. "It is a relevant factor that these were children and not adults of mature years who combat Peking's severe polintion by halting develop-ment of heavy industry and closing polluting factories, the New China news agency reported yesterday. The decision was part of a long-term development plan recently drawn up for this city of nine million people, the agency said. The plan also called for the construction of satellite cities around Peking, and a quadrupling of the capital's park areas.

Peking to get a face-lift

A special committee headed by Peking's mayor, Mr Chen Xitong, has been formed to oversee both the implementation of the plan and construc-tion projects in the city.

The development plan calls for prohibition of any new buildings over two stories within the Forbidden City, in the heart of Peking. China has also decided to place Peking's special state protection. Air pollution has become acute in Peking, particularly during the winter months when smoke from coal used for domestic heating combines with fumes from industrial factories to blanket the city in a pale yellow smog. The authorities have decided that heavily polluting factories in the capital must be closed. moved or transformed. At the end of the century, the

Mr Shehayel, who found this a likely story indeed, began to laugh. "They are not" he said bluntly. So we carried on standing there next to the Druze gunmen and the Israeli troops who were squinting down at this extraordinary scene from their half-tracks in the midday sun.

But surely, we asked Pierrot, the young Christian men were fighters of the Phalange? "Yes, they are soldiers - but they live in Bhamdoun", Pierott replied "So why can't they go there? This is an important issue. What rights do these people have to decide who travels on the convoy under Israeli escort?" His smile was fading useful for building barricades than feeding babies in encircled villages. Mr Shehayel regarded it all with studied weariness. We could continue on our way to Bhamdoun and even Damascus if we wished, he said. Lieutenant-Colonel

The Israeli military command last week issued an order to the Phalange to evacuate all bases in Israeli-controlled territory in southern Lebanon in what was seen as a prelude to the partial Israeli withdrawal from the Chouf mountains to the Awali river. The Phalange at the time issued a statement saying they refused to comply. The Israeli takeover of the barracks sent an estimated 5,000 Christian civilians to the streets. The demonstrators burnt car tyres and rang churchbells in protest against the Israeli move. SPECTRUM

To the manor reborn

Quinlan Terry is the leading country house architect, a man who offers the newly-landed gentry a chance for immortality in brick and stone.

Clive Aslet interviews the Classical revivalist isiting country houses is still big business in Britain. As more owners are forced to open their doors to the public, out troop the public in their ever increasing millions to pay the necessary pound or two and make the tour. The reason is not always clear. To judge from their comments, a lot of visitors do not particularly like architecture (and why should they?), while family portraits and family history leave them cold. Nevertheless, cavesdropping makes it possible to identify one or two strands of unflagging interest.

As everyone knows, the casually arranged snapshots of the owners, their children and dogs, and of their possibly Royal friends and relations can be relied upon to excite a lively curiosity, as well, depending upon the individual, as awe, envy, class hatred or mirth.

The amount of work it takes to polish floors and dust cornices also generates comment. So does the thought that it was once done without vacuum cleaners. Perhaps the sentiment most regularly voiced, and the one that gives country-house visiting much of its popular romance, is simply: it could not be done today. The craftsmen do not exist, there is no money – and where are the magnificos to build?

Ten years ago, one might have agreed. There did not seem to be a future for the country house as a continuing tradition. In the past, building country houses required ambition as well as money – the ambition to establish your family and descendants in a position of ease, authority and invincible social prestige. And a precondition was confidence that the general state of things would continue long enough to make the effort worthwhile. The eighteenthcentury banker or nabob who commissioned Robert Adam sank large sums of money in activities that his children and grandchildren might enjoy more than himself. Such confidence became very difficult after the Second World War. It scarcely existed

In Mrs Thatcher's Britain, the number of people have done well and desire to set themselves up in the country to support a number - a small number - of architectural practices specializing in the country house. This shows a double commitment to architecture, because the chances are that it would be much cheaper to buy an existing eighteenth-century house than build a new one, even one smaller in scale. In addition, the eighteenthcentury has a cultural prestige with which the new might find it hard to

Admittedly the new country houses do not, by contrast with the claims of today's dottier right-wing architectural critics, compare in size or kind with Hatfield House or Burghley. The leading country house architect is Quinlan Terry, a tall, severe man in three-piece tweeds, whose office is in Dedham, on the Stour in Essex. That Dedham today is one of the most perfect English villages is largely due to his vigilance and that of his predecessor and master, Raymond Erith, who died in 1973. Erith was prepared to rush out from his office in a small Georgian house on the High Street and berate the man from the council who had come to paint yellow lines on the road or to erect signs. Often the man from the council went away. Building the public lavatory could not be stopped (public lavatories, Terry believes, are an evil, because they encourage charabancs), but it is sited so far from the road that only a wellrehearsed tour operator would know it was there. Terry still works from Erith's old office. I talked to him in a front parlour papered with pages from The Times, now tobacco-coloured with nicer thing can you do with it than to build a house?" he says, in a mild, scholarly voice that belies the selfadvertisement. "You could spend it on a yacht or a racehorse, which is very temporary. But if you build a house, it's a monument to this age, to what you think of. And it goes on for your son and grandson." Architecture is still a passport to immortality, or at least to the likelihood of something of you surviving 100 years after your death. That is a significant part of its appeal.

The men and women for whom Terry builds are various. On the whole, he prefers new money to old. Architects respond to the vigour, self-assurance it is not an invariable rule: Kingswalden Bury was built for a 14th baronet.

The art of architecture, Terry believes, is not only to give his client what he wants but also to express the client's personality. This is done through the Classical language of architecture and the five orders, Tuscan, Doric, Ionic, Corinthian, and Composite. "Everybody is one of the five orders," Terry comments. Looking the photographs that have been published of Terry's summer house at Thenford Hall, Northamptonshire, it is clear that the client, Michael Heseltine. is a flamboyant Corinthian. "Both he and his wife thought so," Terry says. "But some people can't bear things like finials. This one is for a real old-fashioned aristocrat," he says, pointing to a more sober design. He likes a plain house, with a good roof, big overhang-Yorkshire: "When you see a ing eaves, no gutters, no valleys -building across a field, in a something that will last 200 years." This client will probably merit the

One difficulty for the present-day Classical architect is that the groundrules of Classicism cannot be taken as known. Some clients are connoisseurs in the old style; one in Warwickshire is currently flooding Terry with sugges-tions and urging him to make his house, ironically a remodelling of an and will to spend of the self-made eighteenth-century house, the boldest entrepreneur, while the man with and most original of his career, inherited wealth may be more cautious Another client, on the other hand, and most original of his career. in hanging on to what he has got. Or, as came to Terry after having seen an Terry puts it: "I am interested in article on an earlier Terry house in Country Life and asked for one like it.

A third had already realized his dream house, a rotunda, on canvas with the help of the artist Felix Kelly.

Surprisingly, the rotunda theme is perfectly adaptable to modern needs. You get a raised basement floor, which is practical - kitchen, utilities. dining-room safe, gun room and everything else. You can protect that very well. Above that you have a ground floor which is just for parade, then a top floor which is quite economical for bedrooms. For modern living it is not totally ridiculous."

Yet Terry's recent houses do reflect some changes in ways of life. "Late twentieth-century requirements are different from mid-twentieth century requirements. More and more people are finding that they have got a big house which they can't comfortably live in. It's either too cold in the winter or it's too big. They tend to cut down on their social life. On the other hand, they do like to have 14 people round the dining-room table. But they don't like them staying the night quite so "It means that in the last few years I've got terribly busy giving people who can afford it a little, grand house. Now, a little, grand house, when compared to a Victorian house, is a Georgian house.'

An example of a little, grand house is Newfield near Ripon. It is approached by a double lime avenue, and flanked by big timber barns. There are wings projecting forward to either side. "Seen across the fields you think wow, what a big house." When you get into the courtyard it is in fact a small into the courtyard it is in fact a small house, a very small house, with some scale about it."

ut it was not the style's suitability to modern needs that made Terry a Classicist. He rejects nearly every idea commonly accepted by the architectural establishment. He repudiates the present system of training utterly. Much better, he believes, is the pupil and master relationship of the eighteenth century, which was virtually how he learnt under Erith, after five fruitless years at the Architectural Association and a few agonizing months with the modernists Stirling and Gowan. Originality, he claims, is woefully overrated.

Terry keeps album after album of detailed drawings of buildings made on annual family holidays to Italy, and he quarries them for ideas. So fully is his imagination impregnated with the great buildings of the past that he says,
"I think I am derivative in everything I

To Terry, Classicism is more than a style among others. He is a Christian, and holds the belief that the Classical revealed to Moses on Mount Sina with the Ten Commandments. Their use derives not, as most theorists have claimed, from the primitive hut, but from the Temple of Solomon and the Tabernacle in the Wilderness.

To some extent, Terry's reputation for country houses has become a bugbear. Critics understandably write him off by suggesting that Classicism is all very well for a mansion, but not much else. A rich private client can afford to indulge his personal whims by all but ignoring the cost; the rest of us must fret over restricted budgets. Terry disagrees. Some years ago, he and Erith proved that very modest houses could be designed on Classical principles by building a row of romantic Classical cottages at Frogmeadow, at the end of Dedham village. Now Terry is designing a Classical office scheme off Broadwick Street, Soho, which has just reached the first floor. He sees this scheme, Dufours Place, as a chance to strike a blow for Classicism where the architectural struggle is fiercest.

It is not quite Terry's first office building he erected one with Erith at Gray's Inn in the 1960s. But at six. storeys plus attic. Dufours Place is three floors tailer. "It's about as high as you can go without losing the commonsense values of Classicism. You can just manage if the lifts pack up. It is how people built all around Europe in the eighteenth century. And you can build in load-bearing brickwork - you don't need a concrete

A concrete frame means expansion joints, and they are "the beginning of the end". Inevitably pebbles get in or the pliable mastic with which the joints are filled comes out, so that the concrete cracks. Terry points out that no one knows how the technology of, for instance, Richard Rogers's new Lloyds Building will bear up after 200 years. Yet the quantity surveyor for Dufours Place regarded load-bearing brick as the revolutionary form of construction.

Will this herald a renaissance of brick Classicism as the vernacular in London. Load-bearing brick would be unsuitable for buildings much taller than Dufours Place because the thickness of the ground-floor walls would reduce the lettable office space. Yet Terry is already acquiring cult status on the other side of the Atlantic. It is adulation he is in two minds about. The use of the orders by Post-Modernist architects calls forth the epithet "Mickey Mouse Classicism". The exquisite linocut of Dufours Place which is Terry's entry at the Royal Academy exhibition this year shows it to be fronted with a Baroque doorcase, upon which is perched Terry's son, holding Palladio's Quattro Libri di Architettura. Cruikshank would have liked it, Walt Disney possibly not.

Air travel is divided into two seperate bits. There is the journey proper, which gives you time to read a Harold Robbins or Robert Ludlum novel. Then there is the bit when the plane stops, everyone stands up and nothing happens for ten minutes. Here is a tiny novel to fill that ten minutes.

The American's face became very big, his mouth opening and closing like a sea anemone. He had been drugged, thought Harry. That cup of coffee at the airport had tasted funny at the time, but he had put it down to the local brew. As he reached for his Zametta .55, he lost consciousness.

"Feeling better?" a voice asked. Harry opened his eyes. The big American was looking down at him, and he wasn't smiling any more. There was a gun in his hand. It was Harry's.
"I'm Krotzky," the American said. "You were expecting to meet me."

Then what were you doing on the plane?" Harry asked baffled.

"I wanted to take a good look at you first. I wanted to see if you were the mar we needed for the job. I think you are." "What job?" Harry asked crossly. "I have a job already. I am the European rep for a British firm of fancy mustards.

"You've been reading to many airline novels." Krotzky said smoothly. "No, no, it's just a simple little assassination which could affect the course of world history drastically.

Up the Amazon

As I am off to Brazil in October, my son is already acting in sympathy by washing his hands in what he terms the Amazon Basin. I meanwhile am downstairs in the no less illusory world of the teach-Yourself book, rehearsing the Portuguese for "Please senhor, may I have my Unspeakable thooding, quite beyond local memory and precedent. Hailstones are shivering windscreens into trosted strips: whole flower beds have been woned that by the pelting: Ther's hammer is cracking the air in two and forked lightning is flashing down deep into the furf of Richmond Green, With elemental drama such is this who needs tropical rain towests? Not my som certainly, who is concerned, and rightly, for the weltare of the Indians in the park. The land drains have failed and their haintal is awash. Some devil in me hopes that Petranella has been caught in midwe and bludgeoued into the bracken. and I struggle to quell the fantasy. I inquire about the Indians, but the boy is obviously sworn to secreey.

Parvis Maitland, my horrible lawyer friend, turns up on the doorstep, uninvited as ever. As you know, he is now a circuit judge up Salop way. and I had dared hope he was too busy slapping down the felons of the Marches to bother again with me and mine. Alas, he has struck up a sinister rapport with my son, and seems genuinely concerned about the Indians. I have always had him down as one of nature's hanging judges, more inclined to demand that Brazil, on pain of international excommunication, discharge her hideous debt than to champion the rights of her profitless aboriginals. My son looks as though he is about to brief him and I am ordered from

More flooding. The water meadow at Petersham has grown into a vast cyst on the elbow of the river; the Victorian sewer pipes near the town centre have burst and flung all manner of immentionables into the air above the main road. drawn into this. After Morgan Prewitt's birthday party tantrums the other week. I would give anything for a quiet life, and I suspect Maitland knows it. He is a skilled locator of Achilles heels, which is why he is where he is today,

A new arrival in the neighbourhood: it is Bobsy Marshall, a professional committee woman freshly decamped from Brent, where she passed herself off as the conscience of the community. She "drops by" for the sole purpose of checking out the park wall atrocuies. Why me? Why me?

The lake (now mutated by one of childhood's philological mysteries into the Amazing Basin) has subsided and the road is a river. The egregious Bobsy Marshall is in her element; at any moment I expect to see her plying upstream in a currach sporting a Red Cross ensign.

Terra firma has reemerged, and with n Parvis Maitland - and Bobsy Marshall - both of whom "drop by" and subpoena my son for the inevitable fact-finding mission to the park wall. An unholy alliance, this.

They return with a tiny, headless, black corpse. Fortunately for me though not for The News of the World), it is plastic. It is Samba, one of the Maitland children's dolls allegedly kidnapped by some child before the flood and left to fend for herself in the merciless wild of the park. The Law (P. Maitland), the Caring Laiety (B. Marshall) and Utter Innocence (my son) are a menacing triumvirate, framed thus between the door jambs. I am suspected of complicity and promise to institute an inquiry, though quite why I cannot think. Daughter to the rescue: she bustles up the hall and explains that it is carnivorl time in the jungle, when such occurrences are commonplace. This throws Mailland who, prosaic and literal he is, has never had to contend with such a verbally ambiguous counsel. He and Bobs Marshall melt away down the path like off-comers ill-versed in the regional mores. Which is what they are. Son and daughter retire to the bath for the pressing business of slaying the alligators that have come up the plughole with the floods, and

I return to my teach-vourself book: Please senhor, may I have my head back?" I bet Maitland wishes he had conjected the little black doll with a copy so that at least she could have survived to give evidence. But then we always knew the law was an ass. didn't we.

Beware the small print

Margaret Snijder was only 41 when she died of cancer in June, 1981. A divorcee, she had been left to bring up four children on her own. When she died, the two youngest, a boy and a girl. 13 and 11, were left in the care of Edward Gopsill, the bursar at the school where she worked as a

Three months before her death she appointed him executor of her estate. After her death he wrote to the pension scheme to which she contributed from her modest salary, asking for the money due her children which he planned to invest on their behalf. He was told it amounted to just over £400. He was shocked that it was so little - and no wonder. If Margaret Snijder had been a man her children would have received £13,000.

When Margaret had joined the school she told Edward Gopsill she wanted to take part in a Federation Group Pension Schemes (FGPA) plan for employees in nursing social and charitable work. Members pay in 5 per cent of their earnings, the employer pays in 10 per cent and a pension is provided on retirement. But the scheme rules for death-inservice benefits - the lump sum a family receives if the breadwinner dies before retirement - are vastly more generous to dependants of men than of women. A man's family receives cash equivalent to two and half times his annual salary. Margaret's children were entitled merely to a return of contributions plus 3 per cent interest.

Mr Gopsill was shattered. "I simply could not believe it when I was informed that £434 was all the children were entitled to from the pension scheme. I felt and still feel. that it was my fault. I did not look at the rules carefully enough. It did not occur to me that pension schemes could discriminate against women in this way any more. I thought this had been outlawed by legislation. There is no question that the rules were sent to us at the time. But Margaret never realized, I never realized and I'm certain many other women don't realize that they and their families can be discriminated against in this fashion.

After taking legal advice Mr Gopsill went to the Equal Opportunities Commission, which backed a case against FGPS. But there were difficulties. The case was out of time and there was much legal heartsearching about the section of the Sex Discrimination Act under which a case could be brought. A few weeks ago the case of Margaret Snijder's executor against FGPS was dismissed at Epsorn County Court. The judge said there was no case to Matters relating to death or retirement are specifically excluded from the Equal Pay and Sex Discrimination Acts. Neither FGPS nor the thousands of other pension schemes in Britain that provide inferior benefits for women employees are doing anything illegal.

Arthur Wilcock, general manager of Federated Group Pension Schemes, defends the rules that left Mrs Snijder's children with so little. "It is a fact that it costs more to provide a pension for a woman than a man," he said. "Women live longer than men and therefore will receive their pension for more years after retirement. To balance this we give the men higher death benefits. It is unfair to look at that part of the scheme in isolation from the rest."

Having successfully defended its position in court his organization offered the Shijder children an ex gratia amount of £7,500 from charitable funds.

brother and have recently gone to start a new life with him in Australia. For them the future looks relatively optimistic, but what worries the Equal Opportunities Commission is how many other women and their families find themselves short-changed by this loophole in the law. Barbara Ford, of the ECC, says: "We have repeatedly asked the Government to amend the law. One major obstacle is the difference in retirement ages for men living, on average, seven years longer, pension funds justify discrimination on the grounds of cost. The ECC urges all women paying into private pension schemes to check the small print to see if the benefits offered are less than those provided for male colleagues in the

Widespread inequality

• How widespread is the discrimination that Margaret Snijder's death brought to light? The scheme she was in is not typical of the more common employer's scheme. There are tens of thousands of pension schemes in the country and each has its own rules about benefits. Discrimination against women through payment of lump sum death benefits is probably unusual -though women should still check. But most schemes are discriminating against women and their families in other ways.

The most widespread inequality is that though payment of a widow's pension to the wife of a male employee who dies either before or after retirement is automatic in virtually all private and public-sector schemes, two-thirds of them do not extend the same right to survivors of a female employee.

Some schemes will pay the benefit to a husband who has been dependent on his breadwinning wife because, for instance, he is disabled or unemployed. But just under half the pension schemes that took part in a 1982 survey by the National Association of Pension Funds paid no pension even to these dependent husbands. One obstacle to reform is the fact that the state pension scheme and public-sector schemes such as those for teachers and doctors discriminate against women employees. Another is the deepseated notion that men are the main Arguments about the cost of women's pensions are irrelevant, according to Robin Ellison, a solicitor and pensions expert, who advises companies, trustees and trade unions on pensions. He said: "The trouble with the present way of looking at pensions is that the actuaries who do the sums are trained to regard men and women as members of two distinct groups, instead of looking at their needs as

"The whole point about pensions or any kind of insurance is that people need protection. And these days it is quite clear that men and women need equal protection."

Madam was right, but how to prove it?

Veronica Groocock reported recently on the misery of wrongly being accused of shoplifting. Today a reader tells of her similar experi-

It was a dog and bone situation, only I was the bone and the action was in the familiar and reassuring setting of the lashion department of one of London's major stores. I had been looking at T-shirts, and the helpful assistant brought a selection to the changing cubicle. They were scattered around some draped over my fabric-lined raincoat thrown on a chair. After lots of trying on and chats with the assistant, nothing suited and I needed to be on my way. So I put the coats over my arm, bundled up the shirts and returned them with thanks to the assistant and headed for the door.

I had gone only a few yards when there was a faint buzzing sound which meant nothing to me so I carried on. Then - like a dog to a bone - my arm was grabbed by a

I asked what she was doing and tried to shake her off, but the hand remained firmly clamped. Had madam been shopping in the store? Yes, madam had and would she please release madam's arm. Did madam buy anything? No madam had not because she did not find anything she wanted. Then madam would not mind an examination of the raincoat over madam's arm? The coal was handed over, turned inside out and there attached to the fabric lining one T-shirt. And attached to the shirt, as the assistant indicated: one anti-theft device, the source of the buzzing a few seconds My words came in a rush with

No way. There was, the assistant explained, a set procedure. Madam would kindly stay put while security staff were called to the scene.

She had released my arm and now clutched the "evidence", I continued to protest - was it logical as a shoplifter to make off with one cheap tee-shirt (£12, I recall) that I would never wear anyway.

The affair got a good deal worse when a Les Dawson lookalike.

I was put into a cell-like room and Something snapped, brought me blindingly out of my daze. I recall saying 'Rubbish' very loudly and very well that after you stopped me I told you exactly where I had been and what I had been doing and we examined my coat together and found the tee-shirt together and I explained it had been caught up accidentally in the coat lining. Senior Dawson thinks a while, drums his fingers on the desk, gives me a cool, hard look, says finally with the wisdom of many years' store sleuthing: "Well madam, after considering all the facts in your case I am prepared to give you the benefit of the doubt on this occasion . . . However before we can let you leave we will require your name and address."

That evening I told my husband what had happened. He fired off a letter next morning and demanded an explanation, with an apology taken for granted.

Five days later the 'phone rang at home. It was the managing director. "What can I say, madam", he began. "What can I do to make this up to you." I never heard any more about the letter, but there was a great deal more about the problems of shoplifting, the tact with which store detectives are taught to act, and a regrettable breakdown in the system.

The managing director did eventually reply to my husband's letter. He was unimpressed to read that the Dawson Squad had apparently been subjected to some-thing slightly less painful than being beaten over the head with one of the store's numerous By Appointment coats of arms and told to mend their ways. But the nasty taste remains. That and the nagging

Sift the flour and salt into a bowl and gradually beat in the milk and water to make a smooth lump-free batter. Beat in the melted butter. Rest the batter for at least half an hour before making the pancakes using the same method described for crespelle. Oil, instead of butter, can be used to grease the pan. Ideally the pan should be the largest you can manage, but a 20-30cm pan (8-9 inches) is quite adequate.

In Brittany pancake fillings are instant, one-off affairs. For a ham and egg galette, place a lightly cooked pancake back in the pan. Drop two tablespoons of lightly beaten egg on to it and spread almost to the edges of the pancake. (Use a whole egg if the pancakes are full Breton size.) Top with seasoning and thinly sliced ham cut in small pieces. Cook until the egg is lightly done and fold the pancake in four. Top with a pat of butter and serve immediately. Grated cheese added at the same time as the ham makes this an even more substantial pancake.

Margaret Legum's article on animal experiments (July 27) is most important. This is primarily a moral issue and in this nstance a return to Victorian alues might well be salutary, as there was then a powerful opposition to such practices. These have greatly increased in number and crucky since that ime, especially in the psychological field, as Margaret Legum points out, and a welcome resurgence of the public conscience in these matters is now evident.

Should we pause in our headlong scientific advance and ask ourselves what is the purpose of the human race? If it s a progression to a spiritual olane, which all indicate, then any deliberate cruelty must be regarded as retrogression. There is a general idea that certain experiments which may be beneficial to humans or animals are acceptable, but where does one draw the line?

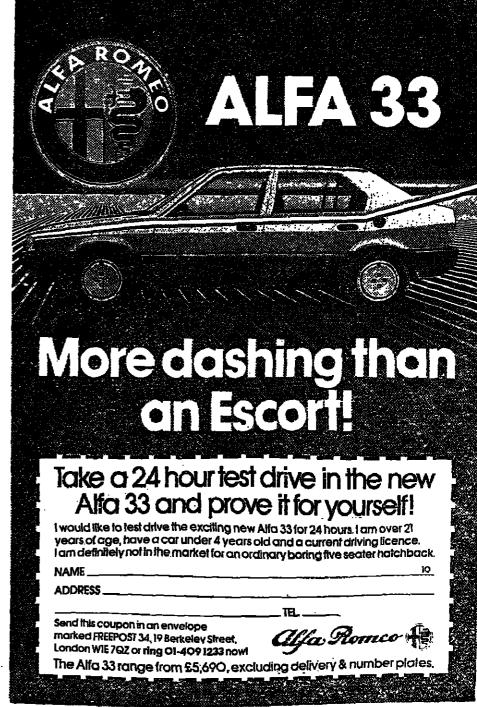

Should we not rather be ooking deep into our human institutions, many of which produce the very problems especially the psychological ones - which we try to transfer

Your recent correspondence on sleep prompts me to ask if any other readers of The Times suffer from what I can only call continuous dreaming: dreams every night and all night long. I say "suffer", since my own dreams are almost variably unpleasant. This has been my condition for more than 15 years. Is there any way of procuring dreamless sleep?

Up the revolutions There are 31 guerrilla and terrorist organizations in Britain. This terrifying news comes from a newly published World Directory and Bubliography to such outfits, compiled to Paire Lanks formark hand piled by Peter Janke, formerly head of research at the Institute for the Study of Conflict. For those who did not know Britain was entered so deeply into revolution here are some of the groups Janke lists: Militant, the Anti-Nazi League, the Socialist Workers' Party, Sinn Fein, the National Front and even the Troops Out Movement. There is, Janke acknowledges, a difficulty of defi-nition. Groups listed, he says, are those which have attempted to pose a threat to established govern-ments since the end of the Second

It is a pity that magazines so seldom name the young women who adorn their covers. It is particularly sad in the case of the latest issue of Weight Watchers. The beautiful smiling model on the cover is Carole Augustine, who died some years ago in her early twenties after misguidedly pursuing an unsound slim-ming diet. Sally Adams, editor of Weight Watchers, says: "We would never have used it if we had known", which I can believe, Colour Library International, who supplied the picture, said: We keep no names of girls or photographers. To us it is just a picture of a girl in a black bikini".

The Queen graciously intimated the other night that James Tye should get knotted. When the inveterately self-publicizing director-general of the British Safety Council was presented to Her Majesty at a reception for freemen of the City of London, she asked what he did in his job. "Among other things. I try to persuade you to wear a safety hat when horse-riding. Your Majesty." "I think I am a little too old for that", said the Queen moving on, unamused.

Robert Maxwell, having failed in his plan to merge Oxford United and Reading, has run into more trouble with football fans. This time it concerns the BPCC trade mark of his British Printing and Communication Corporation, which changed its name from British Printing Corporation in March 1982. The new style is being contested by another BPCC - the British Programme Collectors Club of Hessle, North Hamberside, run by football statistician Norman Lovett Lovett claims he has been using the BPCC initials since 1972, and that Maxwell's appropriation of an extra C is causing him loss of trade. "The British Programme Collectors Club and its mark BPCC are known worldwide to a vast public who follow football", Lovett claims, "but I cannot compete against Maxwell as BPCC. One of us has to go".

 Sex shops in Soho are running a promotional competition. To win a prize competitors have to answer this question: "Who is the Prime Minister of this country?" Is this what the trade would call a tease?

"Politically their ideas are not mine," he says. "I just happened to know someone."

Beirut echoes for the Tamils in torment

Colombo It is only the yard of a Hindu temple, outside Colombo, but in this small space 5,000 people are trying to stay alive. Two things unite them: their racial origin - for they are Tamils - and their fear.

During the nights and days of Sinhalese violence last week the people now in the camp watched their homes and businesses burn. their property ransacked, their belongings scattered.

One middle-aged man said he had been sheltered by neighbours.
"When the rioters came to my house I just had to sit there and watch everything go", he said. A woman in her late thirties told me: "We saw them come to the front of our house. They were waving sticks and swords. We just ran out and over the back

Some of the refugees wear bandages and plasters. "We were beaten", they say simply. One man with a pad of gauze and plaster on his scalp was brought to me. A Red Cross worker explained: "He went to the hospital and they did this to him there. It was not the doctor. The doctors were very good - but the other staff...

People mill aimlessly about the temple yard, as closely packed as people in Petticoat Lane on a Sunday morning. They have little to do except worry. "Where do you sleep?" I asked one person. "Right here", he said, pointing at the sandy ground. "We are just happy that it. has not rained since we arrived."

Some nearby school buildings are also being used to house hundreds of people, who sit on the floor - men, women and tiny children together as though waiting for a public meeting to begin. Two taps and two toilets serve the whole camp. A row of additional toilets with bright red doors are locked, reserved for the temple priests, whose cleanliness must never be defiled.

Initially, of course, food was also in short supply. The sudden arrival of the refugees and the confused circumstances made organization difficult, but bags of flour and dal were being delivered as I walked about. The refugees were sure of at least one meal a day.

The food problems seem likely to continue. But the main worry for most of the inhabitants is security. The temple walls are not high, and access is through a low, wrought-iron gate. Outside, a policeman sits, and a military patrol stands guard at the top of the road.

The camp people feel vulnerable as hostages to reprisals from the gangs of Sinhalese goondas (thugs) who drove them from their homes in the first place. The example of the Sabra and Chatila refugee camos in Beirut is never far from their minds. Official figures show that there are 48.000 refugees in camps throughout the country, but according to relief workers. Colombo alone holds more Relief workers say the camps are sanitary. Now that food and fuel are getting in, additional latrines are being dug and camp committees are being formed. Difficulties still occur with the removal of garbage and the lavatories and water. One camp has only one tap and people have to line up for hours to get water.

A British worker for Voluntary Service Overseas has had to seek asylum in a refugee camp after the college he was working at had been burned down by gangs of Sinhalese

Len Putnam, a teacher at a college in the plantations of Uva Province. was acting as principal of the college. which gives training to estate workers. When the Sinhalese attacked the college last week he had to run across some open fields, and eventually arrived at a convent in the centre of town, which is being used to house refugees. Mr Putnam, who is in his fifties, is the only European in the camp. He is being lodged in the bishop's house at the convent. The VSO organization in Colombo is waiting for the right moment to evacuate him.

Thirty-four British volunteers from VSO have been working in the country and all have been accounted for except for one other, also in the plantation area, whose telephone is out of order.

The Tamils, meanwhile, must also wait. The government is offering to transport the refugees to the north of Sri Lanka, where the Tamil population predominates and where many, though not all, have friends and relatives. Ships are being adapted to take them up the coast. One refugee was pleased. "I don't think it would be safe going by train or road," he said. Two cargo boats have now left carrying more than 1,000 people.

But the refugees are likely to face acute problems in the North, too. where there is insufficient accommodation and water is not plentiful.

the Jaffna district, where the population is 95 per cent Tamil. is mostly quieL although there are said to have been several incidents of ill-treatment of local inhabitants by

The local hospital in Jaffna has been unable to undertake operations because of a shortage of medical supplies and drugs, and there are fears that the arrival of 8.000 refugees on boats from the South will cause acute hardship in the crowded towns.

The reports will not stop the refugees. "This has happened before. you know," said a tall, dark man. The last time was not as bad as this, but we came to this temple as well. We were taken to the North. and after things settled down, we came back. I expect we shall come back again, too, soon. There are not British citizens in the North say enough jobs up there."

our more successful entrepreneurs the day after his appointment as chairman of a nationalized industry had been announced. "Are you out of your mind?" I asked politely. "Oh no, there's method in my madness", was the reply. "It enables me to quit the National Enterprise Board."

I saw his point. Nevertheless running a public corporation has little obviously to commend it. unless of course you can get yourself a transfer fee a la MacGregor. The w arrival from the private sector finds himself confronted with limitless Whitehall intervention, the whims of ministers with an eye to votes, an obligation to satisfy the sometimes idle curiosity of the legislators, and a totally unionized and often militantly organized labour force. He then finds that his remuneration for his pains, albeit modest by the standards of the private sector, is the subject of an annual wrangle and abuse.

So Sir Robert Atkinson's farewell message from British Shipbuilders after three years' hard labour deserves sympathetic understanding. It needs it, too. Announcing that. the corporation lost more than £117m in its last financial year, even though the Government offers a solid gold gift-wrapped coffee-pot or two to every customer, he tells us that this "demonstrated once again the underlying viability of the industry. "Once again" is an especially appealing grace-note.

Now I read in my Times on Monday morning, on the authority of Mr Gerald Kaufman, that all that's really wrong with British shipbuilding is the shameful lack of patriotism of its potential British customers. The Belgians buy their ships at home, as do the French, and of course the Japanese. So why can't the British shipping lines do likewise?

Perhaps it depends on whether they want ships or cash. Provided you don't mind when, or even whether, the vessels you have ordered are delivered, and find that compensation can be good for cash flow (and one can easily imagine customers with such preferences in the present state of the world shipping market), then Scott Lithgow on the Clyde is obviously the place to go. Up to £100m in penalty payments in respect of goods worth £150m is not to be sneezed at. Unless, of course, you happen to be a British taxpayer, in which case you may be tempted to wonder whether this is the ideal way to use your

Sir Robert Atkinson tells us that these little local difficulties will be non-recurring. Perhaps we had better keep our fingers crossed. For as Sir Robert also acknowledged, there does seem to be some incidence of industrial deafness at Scott Lithgow (and one or two other recess for their reports). I do not see places, for that matter). I do not see how we could expect it otherwise -not through any fault of Sir Robert, but through the actions of successive governments over many years. Sir Robert tells Scott Lithgow bleakly. "One cannot carry on with a company with 5,000 deaf men". The trouble is that the Clydeside shippard workers have been given that measures or competition similar. that message - or something similar - repeatedly for 15 years, starting with Mr Wedgwood Benn, no less, in 1968. And every time they have found that the politicians didn't mean it. Why should they believe it this time - even if this time it is for real, as perhaps it will be? That, in a nutshell, is the question which Mr Kaufman and others like him carefully avoid. Most people would probably accept the need for a national capacity to build warships. And it may well be that work would on occasion have to be found to keep that capacity in existence when the Ministry of Defence was strapped for cash and the world awash with surplus shipping. But using a public corporation as a cash transfusion service for BP when that company cannot get the vessels it has ordered (or for that matter as a provider of badly needed hard currency to the Polish Government. which was more or less how British Shipbuilders was treated by the Callaghan government) is a vastly different matter. It is not immediatly apparent that reliance on foreign nipyards for the supply of merchant shipping would be an excessive price to pay for release from future resort to such subterfuges to keep the likes of Scott Lithgow on the payroll (and the fact that others are prepared to subsidize their shipyards makes this alternative more commerically attractive, and not less). Now it is up to Mr Graham Day. Sir Robert's named successor. His task, we are told, will be to prepare the warship yards and ship-repairers for the private sector. If he can also convince the merchant shipping vards that their future genuinely hinges on performance after all these years of crying wolf, he will earn his transfer fee twice over.

Mondale and the Foot factor

Morton Kondracke parades the spectres of failures past that could tilt the balance against Reagan's main Democratic challenger

American political writers seem set on the notion that former Vice-President Walter Mondale, frontrunner for the Democratic presidential nomination, is haunted by ghosts. They simply cannot agree on how many. David Broder of the Washington Post named one: former Senator Edmund S. Muskie, the 1972 front-runner whose candidacy collapsed in its first test. Another writer added the failed presidency of Mr Jimmy Carter, in which Mondale was partner, and the image of Mondale's mentor, the late Senator Hubert Humphrey, the oldfashioned interest-group liberal whom Mondale is increasingly accused of resembling

has been added to the list. In America he is preceived as the symbol of a political party gone too far left to attract popular support; the Democrats, some commentators say, have a mild case of Labour's Mondale's other newly discovered ghost actually has been around for a long time. It is that of Mondale himself - the Mondale of November 1974 who announced after a year of campaigning for the 1976 Demo-cratic nomination that he did not want to spend the rest of his life in Holiday Inns. He said: "I do not have the overwhelming desire to be president which is essential for the kind of campaign that is required". All of Mondale's phosts reflect the widely-held doubts about his ability to win election and govern well. He is well aware of them all and the efforts he and his advisers are undertaking to exorcise the ghosts convey a sense of how he is presidency.

The 1974 Mondale is the easiest to dispose of. Nominally a Washington lawyer, he has been planning or otherwise working on the 1984 presidential race ever since the Carter-Mondale ticket lost to the Republican team of Reagan and Bush in 1980. This year, Mondale will be on the road to make specches, raise money and organize his forces on an average of six or month. And he will stay in Holiday conducting his pursuit of the luns without a murmur. What has happened to change his mind? He said: "In 1974, deep down I knew I wasn't ready to be president. Now, I know I am. I've had the experience of working in the White House. I know how things are done and how mistakes get made. I'm convinced I can run the government, that I've got the vision.

I believe I can be a good president". Which brings up the ghost of Jimmy Carter. How to handle the memory of Carter's presidency and his own involvement in it has been a ticklish issue for Mondale. Cartoonists and presidential rivals often seek to the Carter's failures around Mondale's neck. But when Mondale tries to point out differences he had with Carter, he is accused of disloyalty and ingratitude.

So, Mondale now expresses gratitude and loyalty to Carter for the opportunity to be vice-president while asserting that Carter's mistakes were part of the training programme that qualifies him to be PHS president. If asked, Mondale will

The charge against Mondale is that he cannot say no to anybody, and that by saying yes to everybody, the Democratic Party will inevitably commit itself to policies so far to the left of America's political centre that it will certainly lose the 1984 election.

To this. Mondale says that the al "special interest candidate" in security structure that will not result in the usual backbiting and bickering 1984, if he runs, will be Ronald between the White House, State Reagan, who during his presidency hasn't said no even once to detence Mondale says that instead of the contractors, environmental polmyriad purposes to which Carter set luters, segregationist schools, cornimself, his administration would porations or rich people". I want to see the national interest served, but you cannot do that by refusing to listen to people fence growth, determined efforts to secure arms control and "a foreign who represent other people". One of policy that is coherent, credible, Carter's big mistakes, say Mondale aides, is precisely that he thought he durable and persuasive, with a could govern without listening to the On both foreign and domestic policy, Mondale is considerably to the left of the Reagan adminconstituencies which helped elect him. As a result, he had no friends when the going got rough, Mondale is especially dismissive of the Foot parallel. "The Labour Party committed suicide", he said. They were almost isolationist in terms of the (Nato) alliance and the Common Market. They were talking about all kinds of new nationalization schemes. They picked leader-ship that was unsteady and unper-suasive. I saw polls that showed that Denis Healey might defeat Margaret Thatcher - in other words, a pragmatic progressive was maybe what the people were looking for. But he didn't get a shot at it".

Still, Mondale does not give adequate attention to a tendency within his party to move left during within his party to move left during the primary election stage of a presidential campaign as the rival candidates try to out-do each other for the allegiance of special interest activists. Strong anti-nuclear and isolationist sentiments, for example, affect the Democratic parties of lowa and New Hampshire, where the first tests of 1984 will take place. Those sentiments are being exploited by Senator Alan Cranston, who has made the nuclear freeze centerpiece of his campaign. If Cranston seems to be succeeding there will be leftward pressure on all the other candidates, including Mondale.

But Edmund Muskie's spectre remains the most important for Mondale. It is that of a supposed "sure thing" whose support proved (in one of America's favourite political cliches) "a mile wide and an inch deep" and had no capacity to survive adversity. In 1972 Senator George McGovern had an issue (the Vietnam war) and an intense following which over-whelmed Muskie in the New Hampshire primary,

The worst-case scenario for Mondale-as-Muskie in 1984 would be that Alan Cranston pulls away the anti-nuclear vote; that the Rev Jesse Jackson, a disciple of Martin Luther King, decides to run and draws away Mondale's black support: that Senator Glenn convinces people that he alone can defeat President Reagan, pulling away the pragmatic politicians, and that Mondale is left with nothing, or at least too little to win the nomination. The Mondale campaign's answer is unrelenting effort and minute attention to detail. It aims to create an organization so big that it can withstand any adversity, yet suffi-ciently flexible to anticipate oppor-tunity and take advantage of it. Mondale's campaign has already raised more than $5m - double the amount of the other five candidates put together. The campaign staff consists of the best veterans of the 1976 and 1980 Carter campaigns.

Mondale has been endorsed by members of Congress, local politicians and leaders of black, women's and Hispanic groups. He is thought to be far ahead in pursuit of the AFL-CIO's first-ever endorsement of a presidential candidate. He is negotiating terms to keep Jesse Jackson out of the race, And although the polls show that Glenn is gaining steadily. Mondale's advisers are confident they have constructed a machine that will outlast anything the ex-astronaut can assemble.

rmed conflict tends to generate simplistic labels. Even so, it was disappointing last week to find BBC television ventriloquizing the Voice of America on its Nine O'Clock News by referring, in a straight report. to "the Marxist government" in Nicaragua. This shorthand crudely misrepresents the character of the Nicaraguan regime. Its three-member coalition junta includes Dr Rafael Cordova Rivas, a leading figure in the Democratic Conservative Party, whose nearest equivalent in this. country would be Sir Ian Gilmour. Far from being a fully socialized economy. Nicaragua has, in fact, a larger private sector (59 per cent of gross domestic product) than Thatcherite Britain. Nor is the Nicaraguan regime completely tied to the coat-tails of the eastern block; 43 per cent of its aid, according to the latest available figures (1981), comes from

Most on-the-spot observers, including many who are aggressively anti-Marxist, have a favourable impression of what the new government has achieved since it toppled the Somoza dictatorship. An all-party British parliamentary delegation concluded that "there is much to praise in Nicaragua. The new government has made a determined attack on poverty by raising the living standards of the poorest and has made impressive achievements in the fields of literacy, health and education."

But just as the Nicaraguan government has been crudely caricatured by the right as a Stalinist state, so there has been a corresponding tendency on the left to romanticize the aftermath of the 1979 revolution. The spectacular growth rate achieved in 1980 and 1981 has petered out in the face of the deepening recession, something close to an investment strike in the private sector, and the economic reprisals of the United States. Tensions have mounted, as the right has chafed under Attlee-style austerity measures, while a section of the left has become increasingly frustrated by the unwillingness of the government to press ahead with further nationalization.

These pressures, combined with military raids by American-backed insurgents based in Honduras, provoked the government to adopt emergency powers in 1981 that curbed freedom of expression by opposition groups and newspapers.
At least seven leading dissidents (from both left and right) were imprisoned under these powers but were subsequently released.

But the systematic use of police torture and the killing of dissidents that characterized the previous tyrannical regime has come to an end. The country is also free of the death squads linked to security forces that terrorized communities in El Salvador and to a lesser extent. Honduras, portrayed in American propaganda as bastions of freedom and democracy.

Much play has been made of the fact that no election has been held in Nicaragua since the revolution in 1979. An election has been promised, however, for 1985 and a government commission is currently investigating different methods of election in western countries as a prelude to this. What sort of recommendation the commission makes will be closely scrutinized in the light of the largely bogus elections that President Reagan frequently cites as evidence of "budding democracy" in nearby states under American tutelage. In the case of Honduras, the military retained the right to veto all cabinet appointments, while the choice offered the depleted electorate of El Salvador was limited in the words of the British observer, Lord Chitnis. "that between an impotent and split Conservative Party under the thumb of the military, and a murderous version of the National

Of course, President Reagan, the best auto-cue reader in contemporary politics, is following a script dictated by American interests. His main concern is not so much the development of human rights and freedom, as the maintenance of American influence in Central America. The Nicaraguan revolution is a threat to these interests because it could inspire similar uprisings against corrupt but com-pliant dictatorships sustained by the American government.

The continued support of the Nicaraguan government among its own people has so far insulated it from American reprisals. American funding of opposition groups inside Nicaragua has failed to mobilize popular opposition to the govern-ment. Economic hardship induced by the cancelling of aid and the slashing of the sugar import quota has not destabilized the government. Even the covert war waged by Clafinanced rebels, mostly recruited from the murderous former National Guardsmen, has not provoked the expected response from disenchanted groups.

That is why the American government seems to be moving towards a final, more drastic solution: a direct invasion of Nicaragua by its puppet government in Honduras with whatever backing is needed to make it successful. This would be as deplorable an act of aggression as Russia's invasion of Afghanistan. And it should provoke every bit as much protest, not least since Britain, as an ally of America. is in a position to influence American policy in a way that it is not able to sway that of Russia.

But even if American gunboat diplomacy is stopped, there is sadly an insidious way in which it may yet succeed. The more economic and military pressure the United States generates, the more it will promote authoritarian and centralizing pressures within Nicaragua. If these pressures gain impetus within a beleaguered economy they will discredit the hopes and aspirations that the revolution gave rise to.

It is a defence to murder that the killing was caused by the use of reasonable force in the prevention of crime or effecting lawful arrest, elements which include self-defence. The Cardinal will have been given circumstantial accounts of the death as contained in the evidence of eyewitnesses carefully recorded by priests of his diocese. Those accounts very likely suggest that a murder was committed. But one begs leave to doubt if the Cardinal has access, direct or indirect, to the evidence of the members of the UDR patrol. Without that knowledge it is unsafe to cry murder. It is particularly unsafe for one in cardinal's robes to cry murder.

From the partial accounts of the incident that have been published it appears that a small group of young men and women were gathered and chatting near the centre of the city at one a.m. on a warm summer's night. They were approached by an armed UDR patrol of men and women soldiers, who asked questions and took particulars. Some refused to answer. Other young complaints of Cardinal O Finish

This is the seventh man to be No one, whether he wears a shot dead by police or soldiers in county Armagh in the past eighteen months. It is frequently alleged, and as frequently denied, that the security forces have a policy of "shoot to kill" IRA and INLA suspects. The outward and visible facts do not point persuasively to that conclusion. The tension caused by the open policy of the terrorist organizations to kill soldiers and policemen on and off duty, the alertness to danger and quick reaction on which survival thus depends, provide an alternative and adequate explanation of the pattern of shootings, though not of course a full explanation of any one of them.

> Soldiers and policemen have no licence to kill in Northern Ireland that they do not possess in other parts of the United Kingdom. Their action is subject to the requirements of common law, the two chief elements of which, if the shooting is to be lawful, are that the situation must be one of the commission or apprehension of serious crime and that the force used is no greater than might reasonably be supposed to be necessary to prevent the crime or escape, or in self-defence. The just application of those rules in any case crucially depends on the thorough investigation of the facts. It is at that point that the suspicions and gate. Among the victims' families and community the RUC is likely to be considered as trustworthy an investigating agency as is the Metropolitan Police by the denizens of Railton Road in Brixton. The RUC's inquiries, if thorough, are cer-tainly not speedy. The director of public prosecutions to whom the police report will make a laconic announcement that there are insufficient grounds for proceeding farther, if that is his conclusion which it usually is, and the true nature of the circumstances of the death will remain unclear. It is however quite wrong to suggest that members of the security forces; never stand trial for unlawful killing in Northern Ireland. They do, but seldom. Seldom too is anyone suspended from duty while inquiries are made.

There is none of that electrified reaction on the part of authority to a possible miscarriage, as happened in London when Mr Stephen Waldorf was shot (not killed) by police in mistake for another man. Of course, the state is under attack in Ulster by political gangsters who have no scruple and no reserve, and that is an inevitably callousing experience. The vicious hatred of the attack can be read from the details of the trial of 38 defendants which is just coming to an end in Belfast after 117 days. But the state is defended from that attack in the name of legitimate authority, of civil peace and the rule of law. It behoves those bearing that responsibility to keep intact the doing of justice and the appearance of justice, most especially when the actions of their own agents are called in question.

YUGOSLAVIA TAKES ITS MEDICINE

facing up to the growing crisis in Yugoslavia. At the joint session of the Assembly last week, the Prime Minister, Mrs Milka Planinc, emphasized the the comprehensive "stabilization programme" would involve profound changes in the life of time to expand the vital tourist every citizen. She spoke of the industry. need to free industry from excessive constraints, reduce state intervention, and shock the economy out of its present stagnation. The Party leader, Mr Dragoslav Markovic, maintained at the Central Committee meeting which endorsed the programme that the radical reforms would not mean "political isolationism". On the contrary, Yugoslavia will be linked even more closely with the countries of Western Europe. This should be good for Yugoslavia-and for the West. The need for change has become increasingly evident in the political vacuum which Yugoslav leaders themselves admit followed the death of Tito. . But in the last decade of Tito's rule there was such stagnation in government that extensive innovation was delayed by his successors, who were more concerned with maintaining stability. Now change is being dictated by economic necessity. After six months of tough negotiations, emergency loans worth $4,000 million were agreed with fifteen Western countries, Japan, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. But this will do little more than ease the immediate burden of debts totalling some $20,000

Inflation has been running at over 30 per cent, and many internal transactions are conducted in dollars rather than dinars. Unemployment tops 12 per cent; if the thousands working abroad are included, it approaches 20 per cent. Many "guest workers"

Tito's successors are at last in Western Europe fell victim to the general slump and returned home to swell the number of unemployed and the large sums of hard currency they had formerly sent back to their family in Yugoslavia were lost to the economy. Nor is it a good

The extent to which Yugoslavia's six republics and two autonomous provinces are affected by the economic crisis varies greatly, adding considerably to nationalist tensions. Unemployment in Kosova and Macedonia, for example, is more than sixteen times higher than in industrialized Slovenia, Albanians - not a Slav people - make up a quarter of the Kosova population; they resent the better employment prospects of the Serbs. Nationalist grievances have led to bitter rioting, with demands for Albanian unification only one aspect political situation. In Bosnia Muslim fundamentalists were imprisoned for campaigning to establish an Islamic state, and in Croatia even the party leadership has been purged for nationalist tendencies. Separatism has grown with the conviction that Serbia receives preferential treatment, and Croats are particularly bitter about the imprisonment of several leading of a deeper discontent with the intellectuals. The media in Yugoslavia. however, suffers less censorship than in other communist countries, and many problems are debated in a lively and outspoken way. Idleness, corruption, nepotism and despotism are only some of the charges levelled at party members. Ordinary workers seem disillusioned with the "self-management system" and claims of popular participation in government are not taken seriously since referenda are officially managed and elections no longer provide a genuine choice of candidate.

Improving labour productivity will not be easy. An labour proofficial report complained that on average one in ten of the workers in the state sector was absent and the others did less than five hours' work a day. A member of the Kraigher Commission which was charged with the preparatory work for the reforms predicted serious labour problems because the strict conditions requested by foreign creditors would have to be met. Yugoslavs can expect a drop in living standards and general demands to tighten their belts as measures are enforced to ensure the repayment of debts.

After the visit in March of the Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Tikhonov, further trading agreements were signed with the USSR, which is Yugoslavia's major supplier of oil. The need to pay in scarce hard currency is avoided by delivering in exchange a range of products from electronics to foodstuffs. But Western fears of growing econ-omic reliance on the USSR are misplaced. Diplomatic relations with the USSR are much less bitter than in the past, but Yugoslavia remains highly critical of Soviet policies. The large expenditure of manpower and other resources on defence is accepted by most Yugoslavs as necessary. Soviet intervention in Czechoslovakia and Afghanistan is subjected to repeated criticism in the media, and Yugoslavia has no intention of suffering the same fate. Although no liberal democracy, Yugoslavia is moving closer to the West both politically and economically. This trend should be encouraged. Yugoslavia is strategically placed. Western support for it is very much a matter of enlightened self-interest.

Sir, Mr Griffin (July 27) does less than justice to those of us who serve the community as justices of the peace when he asserts that we are honours-seekers. There are countless iustices who were proposed by others than themselves (myself, for example).

Keeping down the Science spending and tangible assets cost of power

From the Chairman of the London Electricity Board

Sir, While I cannot approve of Mr Alex Henney's enthusiasm (August 1) for a pre-publication public debate of the LEB's 1982-83 accounts (publication is on August 4). I must, to ensure an accurate public record, take issue with him on a number of points he makes to support his council's view that we should pass on our surplus to consumers in the form of a rebate. It is not, as he implies, the practice of the board's members to "rubber stamp" reports by chief officers. The recommendation not to repay the surplus was debated long and hard before being supported.

The board did not vote "to retain the money". It decided to use the surplus to pay off its debt to Government in the firm belief that this would result in a real prospect of keeping electricity prices down in

His dismissive attitude to administrative problems belies the genuine difficulties of identifying to whom a rebate should be paid. Not all consumers would have been eligible and, bearing in mind the high turnover of London consumers, some would be difficult to trace.

These particular matters aside, it is the nature of Mr Henney's letter that disappoints me. In the last few vears the board has made great strides in improving efficiency and reducing costs. (We have, in fact, reduced our staff by 1,400 and cut our costs by £14m.) Yet Mr Henney, as a member of the board and present at the debate in question, chooses to write to you in advance of the publication of the annual accounts, discusses the board's proceedings and offers a one-sided account of the process by which fellow members reached their decision on the rebate.

My colleagues and I fully accept our accountability to the public through Parliament for the performance of LEB, but the board will not function properly unless its members have respect for each other.

I regret this lack of inhibition regarding the board's deliberations and urge him to have a higher regard for the confidentiality and freedom of expression without which there can be no bold thinking and effective decision making.

Control of asbestos

From Professor E. D. Acheson and Dr M. J. Gardner

Sir, In your brief reference to our report, "The control limit for asbestos", in your issue of July 29 you mentioned that we recommended the formal prohibition of the manufacture and importation of new products made of brown or blue

We wish to point out that we also recommended that, in view of the fact all forms of asbestos (including white ashestos) can cause cancer, the use of all types of asbestos should be curtailed as safer and effective substitutes become available and in the meantime further improvements in control should be made as advances in engineering occur.

In making these recommen-dations we took into account that asbestos is extremely durable and that products containing it may require further processing in circumstances far removed from its production where dust levels are difficult to control. Yours faithfully.

Paid jobs for all

From Mr Alan Eden-Green Sir. Why does Francis Bennion (July 28) assume that there will never again be paid jobs for all? Certainly we can see a future in which much hitherto done by humans will be done by courtesy of the new technology. But can we not envisage a society in which the rest is roughly divided between those able and willing to work for money?

Could we not devise a system whereby most people worked for about 20 hours a week (or nine months a year, say,) rather than only some of them doing 40? It has for long seemed absurd that many industrial executives are today working a longer week than their grandfathers did. Most of them would like more leisure, more really free time, but our economic system seems to insist on putting all the work into fewer hands. It ought not to be too difficult to change that. Yours etc.

From the Reverend Julian Charley and others Sir, If the Government is to prove its equal concern for the less fortunate members of society as for by Mr Francis Pym, there is one anomalous situation that could very simply be rectified. As the law stands, someone drawing supplementary benefit is not allowed to earn more than £4 extra per week, whereas for those who are in regular employment there is no such limit when they take on secondary jobs. The implication of the law is that those on supplementary benefit are a drain on the state's resources and should be penalised accordingly.

It is naive to imagine that people are on supplementary benefit because of indolence. The census figures of 1981 for this Everton ward Supervision on parole is of tried success with many serious offenders. Those with shorter sentences may well be serving a first custodial sentence or have committed crimes of lesser gravity. Offering them similar prospects of release should bring similar results.

The scheme could, of course, only be conditional upon resources for genuine and rigorous assessment in prison and for the requisite standard of supervision by probation officers in the community.

Parental duties and the Pill

From Mr M. L. Barrett

Sir, The assumption made (July 30) by the National Honorary Secretary of the Responsible Society is baseless. It is the responsibility of parents to imbue their children with the belief that the act of procreation is better left until maturity. If a girl under 16 asks her doctor for the Pill the assumption to be made is that her parents have either rejected that responsibility or failed in their attempt to discharge it - after some 12 years or more of trying.

It is no bad thing that the should do what it can to avoid there being any little pieces to pick up. Yours sincerely. MARTIN L. BARRETT.

Grey House, Beeches Drive, Farnham Common, Slough, Buckinghamshire. August 1.

From Mr R. J. A. Long Sir, The two court cases referred to by Mr Barker (August 1) wherein the judgments removed parental control over the children involved are fundamentally different to the action raised by Mrs Gillick.

The act of the court in these reported cases was to consider whether the natural parental authority should be overturned, thereby giving the exception to the usual rule. The courts presumably require to see considerable negligence by the parents or circumstances likely to cause obvious harm to the child before upsetting the status quo.

Gillick v West Norfolk and Wisbech Area Health Authority was an attempt to ensure that parental authority continues unless it can be proved in court that it is misplaced. There has been no such judgment in this case, or is Mrs Gillick guilty until proved innocent?

Sir, I remain, yours faithfully, R. J. A. LONG, 12/3 Craigleith Avenue South, Rayelston, Edinburgh. August 1.

From Dr A. R. Rogers Sir, Your correspondent, Ian Barker

(August 1), makes the point that on matters of under-age sex and contraception parental authority may not always respond in the best interests of the child. Indeed he is right, but when parents are neglectful. absent or non-caring there exists adequate legislation under the indicated an unemployment rate of Children and Young Persons Act to bring those in moral danger and under 17 into care. Thus a doctor cheap labour by offering the unemployed a bit on the side, while would be acting correctly to extend professional confidence to include those properly concerned with the at the same time defrauding the state care of his patient.

Sadly, all too often such young people are taken into care, only to be issued contraception by the local authority. The issue of providing contraception to children is certainly one of law, but is also a testing area. of whether society has the will to provide children with a fully protected childhood. For so many young people childhood seems to end at 12 or 13 and if, indeed, we lack the will or intention to provide adequate care then we must accept changes in law should allow

Tax on Soviet charters

From Mr William F. Newton Dunn, MEP for Lincolnshire (European Democrat (Conservative)) Sir. The West's answer (leader, July 26) to price-cutting by the Soviet merchant fleet should be a special tax added on to the freight rates at which the Soviets charter their ships to Western customers.

If the tax were levied throughout the European Community it would cover a substantial proportion of world sea trade and even more so if the United States and Japan could be persuaded to do the same.

Not only would such a tax reduce Soviet price-cutting but it would also reduce their earnings of hard currencies with which to buy yet more ships from hard-pressed Western owners. Yours sincerely.

A rod in pickle

From Mr David F. Sutton Sir. Can it be that every leader writer in the country has underestimated the intelligence and political acumen of Sir Keith Joseph?

The decision announced in Corporal Punishment in Schools (report, July 29), will produce a system so potentially chaotic that no headmaster dare allow corporal punishment in his school.

By one shrewd stroke Sir Keith has de facto banned corporal punishment whilst not offending the not inconsiderable Conservative body of the "hang 'em, flog 'em" brieade. Yours faithfully.

'Improved' bread

From Ms Ruth Evans and others Sir, As representatives of organis-ations concerned with the welfare of different groups, we write to express our joint concern at present Government proposals for new regulations governing the composition of bread and flour.

The effects of these regulations would be to remove the requirement for the fortification and restoration of flour with certain minerals and vitamins. We see no evidence whatsoever that, amongst the vulnerable groups who rely most heavily on white bread as a staple diet, the intake levels of the relevant substances are sufficiently high to justify this decision.

In fact what evidence there is suggests quite the opposite. Most markedly, recent studies have shown the serious effects of poor nutrition, especially thiamin deficiency, for very elderly people. There is also growing acceptance of the importance of high vitamin B levels before and during early pregnancy in the prevention of congenital malforaccepted that white bread fulfils a Nameless JPs substantial role in the diet of many low-income families. In particular, pressures on school meals services mean that an increasing number of children rely on sandwiches for their midday meal. We believe that any reduction in the requirements surrounding the nutritional quality of white bread and flour could have grave consequences for the health of the elderly, of children and of pregnant women and young babies.

At the very least, we would urge the Department of Health and Social Security and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to defer these regulations until they can produce British evidence that levels vitamin sufficiency amongst those vulnerable groups are such as to justify removing the requirement for their addition to white flour and bread.

Astronomers find a comet's tail By Clive Cookson, Technology Correspondent

Observations from the Infrared Astronomical Satellite (IRAS), which seemed to show a swarm of unidentified objects moving together across the sky mystified astronomers at the IRAS control centre at the Rutherford Laboratory, Oxfordshire. Then Dr John Davies, of Leicester University, realized that the satellite, launched in January, had detected the long tail of a well-known comet, Tempel 2, on which no tail had been seen before. (Leicester University astronomers have already spotted four new comets this year from IRAS

The discovery of the 20 million-mile long tail is excita class of comet, with a short orbit round the sun, which many astronomers had believed to be tail-less. It might mean that all comets, even old and fuded ones, have tails that would be visible in infrared

Tempel 2's tail consists of dust blown from its nucleus and warmed by the sun enough to radiate in the infrared region of the spectrum. The radiation was just strong enough for the ultra-sensitive IRAS telescope but is probably too faint to be detected on Earth because of atmospheric

Court will not make council decisions port Group Ltd Before Lord Justice Griffiths and Mr Justice Forbes

[Judgment delivered July 29] It was not the function of the court to substitute its own view of the way in which a council should have exercised its discretion for that of the council itself, and the templation to do so had to be resisted at all costs.

The Queen's Bench Divisional The Queen's Bench Divisional Court so observed, refusing an application for judicial review brought by the Cedar Transport Group Ltd to quash a general rate decision by Greenwich London Borough Council.

Mr Gerald Moriarty, QC and Mr Harry, Sales for the applicants: Mr Harry Sales for the applicants; Mr Roger Henderson, QC and Mr Charles George for the council.

LORD JUSTICE GRIFFITHS said that the applicants were commercial ratepayers in Green-wich. On March 23, 1983, the wich. On March 23. 1983, the council had resolved to make a general rate of 227.62 pence in the pound for the financial year 1983/84. That meant that the and clear terms all the relevant 1983/84. Inal meant that the applicants' rates rose from £6.421.07 in the previous year to £8.139.69 in 1983/84.

They now argued that no reasonable local authority would have decided to incur total expenditure on the scale decided by the reasonable sound.

the respondent council. There was no scrious suggestion that the

But by approving a rate based upon an estimated expenditure for the year that exceeded, by approximately £10m, the target imposed by central Government (in pursuit of its policy of reducing public spending), the respondent council would be penalised by the Government with a cut of £5.7m in its block with the penalised by the Government with a cut of £5.7m in its block with the penalised by the Government with a cut of £5.7m in its block with the penalised by the grant That would have to be made grant. That would have to be made

However, since the applicants could point to no relevant factor that had not been drawn to the attention of the councillors who had considerations that they should have in mind when determining the level of expenditure, the councillors had nevertheless arrived at so unreasonable a conclusion that the court should draw the inference that they must have either ignored or misunderstood that advice. That was a dangerous and in which the respondent council should have exercised its discretion for that of the respondent council itself. That was not the function of the court, and the temptation had at all costs to be resisted.

By the very nature of things, local authorities being political animals, what the majority of the council considered reasonable expenditure would probably appear unreasonable to the minority. It might appear unreasonable to the court in the sense that if the court had had the task of weighing the various factors. task of weighing the various factors involved in the decision it might have concluded heavily against the decision taken by the council.

But if it could not be demon-

Only in a case where the decision of the council had been so outrageous that no right thinking person could support it, would it be right to draw such an inference and interfere with a decision making process that Parliament had entrusted to the council.

There was no hard and fast rule that a mortgagee exercising his power of sale under a mortgage might not sell to a company in which he was interested but he had to show he had taken reasonable steps to obtain the best price.

THE ARTS

After thirty years of music hall Jimmy Jewel turned to straight acting, and tomorrow returns to the Lyttelton in You Can't Take It With You. Interview by Sheridan Morley

Marvellous on the boards

Though it won a Pulitzer Prize on its first outing in 1936, and though its current Broadway revival with Jason Robards and Colleen Dewhurst is about the best thing to be seen in an otherwise moribund New York Kaufman and Hart's classic comedy You Can't Take It With You remains curiously little-known over here; the National Theatre production opening iomorrow may however be about to:

This is the one about the eccentric Sycamore family, who survive the Depression in New York by becoming so totally detached from reality that they cease to exist even for income tax purposes: it is a play about love and egocentricity and immigration and mild lunacy in roughly that order, and like much of the best of Kaufman and Hart it affords an entire gallery of wonderful character studies from the refugee Russian ballet-master all the way through to the mother who spends ten years as a playwright because somebody unaccountably delivers a typewriter to her front door. For the National, a starry castlist: includes Geraldine McEwan, Brewster Mason, Margaret Courtenay and Ronald Hines, but the key role of the grandfather, the one being played on Broadway now by Robards, goes to Jimmy Jewel in his first return to the National and indeed the live theatre in almost a decade.

The last time he was there was when the company was still housed at the Vic and he was doing Comedians: "We started that at Nottingham with Richard Eyre, also now here at the National, directing and Peter Hall came to the first night and asked how soon we could move down to the Vic. In fact it took about six months. because I'd already agreed to do The Sunshine Boys in the West End and they were good enough to wait for me. Mind you, that was the part of a lifetime: plays like Comedians don't happen twice. When I first read it I thought it was far too full of filthy language in the first act; not that I was shocked, but I knew that if all the rude words were spoken in the first act then the Jonathan Pryce character would never be able to use them so shockingly in the second. Eyre agreed with me and eventually Trevor Griffiths, the author, did too; one of the joys of starting out on the halls is that you learn what an audience will ensures pleasant surprises. A thronged house on Monday heard an opening set which lasted just over an hour and Jimmy Jewel only started in the legitimate theatre when he was way past his fiftieth birthday:

"Frank Muir was then running the comedy at the BBC and about fifteen years ago he asked me to do a Variety Playhouse script called Spanner in the Works: I'd never done a play before, but variety theatres were closing up all. over England, my cousin Ben Warriss was keen to end the double act and my wife and son took one look at the script and said, well, what have you got to lose? So I did it and since then I've been an actor. The irony is that now Ben is back in the business too, acting in a summer season of Hi-de-Hi on Bournemouth pier. But we'll never do the act again. All that's over. When Ben said he didn't want to go on with it, I thought I was finished too so for a while I went into property, doing up flats in Kensington. I trained as a master carpenter, you see, before-I went on the halls, and I've always owned flats because I learnt to be very careful about the money I was making when times were good. I came from a music-hall family and I'd seen too many good comedians fall on hard. times not to learn a bit about where to put the money away.

"We were really a family called Marsh, but father always worked as Jimmy Jewel. He wouldn't let me call myself Jimmy Jewel Jr, so for years. I worked as Maurice Marsh because was always doing Chevalier im-pressions; then we kept changing our names on the bills so the audience wouldn't know it was all one family. Actors today don't know they're born. just having to rehearse and do one or two plays at a time; we used to have to pack the scenery, run the band calls, everything. For a while I went off on my own, running what they used to call the 'If It' bills, for £6 a week you had to do the comedy spot in the first half of the bill twice nightly, then you had to manage the other acts, do the paying out on the Saturday night, and if there was any money extra then you shared it out on a percentage basis: that's why they were called If it'.

"Those were the days when I learnt to be careful about money. I used to have to go round paying out £6 a week to once great comedians like Ernie Mayne who'd lost everything and gone so mad that he used to see imaginary income-tax inspectors hiding in dressing-room cupboards. It was a rough business. But then I met good years up the top of the bill: we never once had a quarrel, at least not when anyone else was there to see it. You have to run a double act like a marriage, stick to the rules, otherwise it all goes wrong. Mind you, by the end the whole business had gone wrong the variety impresarios all went into commercial television and allowed the old theatres to crumble away. When I started out, there were 22 theatres in the Greater Manchester area all with different variety bills playing twice nightly six nights a week, and all that was allowed to crumble away to nothing because they thought there might be more money

"But once you're in the theatre you can never really leave it all the time I had out in the 1960s, doing up the flats. I felt really terrible. Thought I was dying of something. The moment the script of that Variety Playhouse came along I felt marvellous again and that's how I've felt ever since. Then after quite a lot of television acting I thought maybe I was ready for a stage play, and Bernie Delfont brought me The Sunshine Boys, which was by Neil Simon but could just as well have been written about Jewel and Warriss. It was the story of a double act, so by the time I got to the audition in New York for Neil Simon I already knew thirty years more about his play than he did. He kept asking me where I learnt the timing. Jewel and Warriss, I told him, but I don't think he knew much about the English music halls.

"Anyway he seemed to like me, so much in fact that when the Delfont deal fell through he let me buy the rights in the play myself for London and sent his own brother over to direct. Six months we did, at the Picca dilly, then Comedians again, then a lot more television plays and now this. Mind you, I made a few mistakes along the way: turned down a play at Hampstead called Incident at Tulse Hill because nobody bothered to tell me that Harold Pinter was going to direct it, and I thought who needs a play about an actor's suicide in a railway tunnel when there are three million unemployed? But I've just done a television film for David Puttnam, all about a cricket groundsman fighting for his job against a new committee, and that should be on Channel 4 this autumn.

"Once you've played the Empire you know two things:

Jewel as grandfather in You Can't Take It With You survival, and humility. That's really all an actor needs, that and a good script. There's a book by Neville Shute called The Pied Piper, about an old Englishman leading children out of Occupied France in the war. That's what I want to do next, as a six-part television series, if I can just get the rights. I don't have any great classical yearnings: people keep telling me I'd be marvellous in Chekhov but I can't understand a word of it, and I could never get the rhythm of Shaw's language right for Doolittle in Pygmalion. Arthur English managed it marvellously on television but I could never get near it. Then they offered me Lear and the Merchant of Venice at Exeter, so I went out and bought both books and couldn't understand a bloody word of them either. It's no good doing things you can't understand or won't enjoy: if you're not going to be happy on stage, then how is the audience going to enjoy it? As soon as I start becoming an embarrassment to myself or other people in the theatre, that's when I'll stop. Until then, it's the best life in the

Rameau's delights exuberantly relived

Aix-en-Provence

Afer 200 years of neglect Jean-Phillipe Rameau has, in the last 20 or so, been not entirely without honour in his own country: William Christie and Jean-Claude Malgloire have seen to that. Now, though, it is Année Rameau, and the sudden upsurge of interest and activity in France is accompanied. particularly where his operas are concerned, with a certain fierce defensiveness which looks set to start up another guerre des bouffons.

At the Festival of Aix-en-Provence there are recitals, chamber concerts and a rather sketchy exhibition. Above all which exuberantly recreates that IV. fusion of dance, song and spectacle, of intellectual and sensual pleasure, above all of extravagance and economy, that is of the essence of Rameau's music-theatre.

The early eighteenth-century setting of Aix's Théâtre de l'Archevêché is further focused by Pizzi's dark pillars, which move to provide suitable framings, against a plain, reflecting backdrop, for Pizzi's lavish designs, machines and there were five performances of costumes. Art of Cricket Fine Art Society

The British Museum's current Sporting Life exhibition seems to open up an infinitude of possibilities. Why range so widely - would there not be more than enough material in just one sport? Why he so narrow - how about including paintings and sculptures as well as prints? As though in answer to both these questions, John Player has sponsored a sizable exhibition, and a substantial book to go with it, devoted exclusively to that most English of games, cricket. Art of Cricket, at the Fine Art Society until August 13, begins at the beginning in the approved Richard Williams manner, and goes on, if not until the end (for who would dare to predict that?), at least up rather the variety of character to Ruskin Spear's lively Pop- painters like Francis Hayman or Arty portrait of Fred Trueman. Its impact seems to have been less on twentiethcentury painters - you have to look quite hard to determine why Carel Weight's The First Cricket Match of Spring is actually so called. But there is still plenty of material left undisturbed: Sir Gerald Kelly, for example, painted some of his most evocative small panels at the Oval facing towards the gasworks during cricket matches, but none of them is included. Bad Language

Hampstead

In the first scene of Dusty Hughes's play, a student complains that the college clocks stopped in the 1930s and gets the reply "What better preparation for the 1980s?" True cnough.

The place has been sufficiently infiltrated by structuralism. drugs and girl undergraduates to justify the description "Cam-bridge at the present time", while the guilt-laden contrast between this privileged elite and their unemployed contemporaries takes you back fifty years. It is easy to work out which of these boys and girls would have helped to break the General Strike and which would have died in Spain.

Bad Language does more than draw this simple equation, partly, I suspect, lest it be found simple-minded. Unlike his Cambridge contemporary David Hare, in Teeth 'n Smiles, Mr Hughes still seems to be taken in by the glamour of the place, and to cherish the idea that the doings of the Oxbridge young are news.

As a result, he has converted a particular university theme into a standard university play. The cast - students and a supervisor from the English faculty - figure as aesthetes ranged against the unseen rowing hearties. There is an old college scout, scandalized at the goings-on of the young gentlemen. Finals and the ADC production are simultaneously looming, and the supervisor is having problems with the brightest pupil. Most of the characters are sharply drawn and played to the narcissistic, rebellious or cynical life by Mike Bradwell's company. There is the golden-haired

Robin Lermitte as a Wunderkind director, projecting a precise blend of precocious authority and naked vulnerability through perfectly articulated sentences and a dandy's profile. He has an equally arresting room-mate in Kevin Whately as a working-class high flyer churned up with Lawren-

Breffni McKenna, sliding into drug addiction, and Anjela Belli loading her beloved teacher with stolen books, likewise slide vertiginously between poise and precariousness. And there is a marvellous performance from Alan Rickman as the supervisor, laceratingly derisive on first encounter and then bringing the same quality to bear on getting them all out of trouble. What the production is unable to do is to cut the ties writer. Just as Mr Lermitte and his gang of "Illyrians" are determined above all to impress and glitter, so Mr Hughes sweats like mad to give his play an amusing and provocative surface. The dialogue often seems to reflect the process of starting with a cliché and then thinking of something different. Part of a supervisor's job is to act as moral counsellor, so, naturally, Mr Rickman has to sleep with his students. Naturally the hearties break up the ADC set; so Mr Hughes then goes ahead and electrocutes them. The writing is always intelligent, and sometimes very funny. It is also strained, and leaves the real clichés (such as an attempted suicide curtain line) fully exposed. Geoff Rose's set. doing duty for tutorials, late-night drinking and theatrical dressing room, at least feels like Cambridge 1983.

Promenade Concert

Albert Hall/Radio 3

Even the non-Russian works in Monday night's concert had Russian connexions, Britten's Cello Symphony through its association with Rostropovich and the prelude to Janáček's From the House of the Dead through its debt to Dostoevsky. But the main work was Russian to the core: Rachmaninov's Second Symphony.

I admit to looking forward to this performance with special relish. The combination of chmaninov. Kalike and the Philharmonia seemed particularly auspicious. If hopes were not, entirely fulfilled it was not so much that there were occasional orchestral blemishes but that certain passages were treated in a manner that seemed out of character with the interpretation as a whole.

The Adagio, for instance, was done with wistful restraint. The broad clarinet solo was elegantly played by John McCaw and the discreet cello and bassoon counterpoint nicely underlined. But music of similar mood at the centre of the Scherzo was heavily laden with portamentos and sounded indulgently soupy.

So, too, did Mr Rattle's long the European predingering at the peak of some of London next January.

Philharmonia/Rattle the arch-like phrases in the slow movement, and I wished that he had maintained at such points the more free-flowing, casy expressiveness and refined taste that he had shown elsewhere. The undulating dynamics and shifting tempos were conveyed with structural security, the orchestral detail (the yearning horns especially) pointed with discrimination; and the performance had the breadth and human warmth that seem inherent in this readily communicative music.

Human warmth is not perhaps the quality that comes first to mind in Britten's Cello Symphony but Mr Raitle's account had a degree of tension and textural transparency that highlighted the score's symmetry and sense of inspired calculation. Cello and orchestra may well be equal partners here, but I found the ear constantly attracted by Colin Carr's impeccable playing, icily incisive, muscular and assertive.

More worries Mind Over Cancer (BBC 1) was the latest of a number of programmes demonstrating the link between mind and body, although "link" is quite the wrong word since mind and body are not separate entities. They are each other. This is not a novel idea - the medieval theory of "humours" is established upon it - but it has taken a long time to impress the scientific community. The men in white coats have characteristically treated the body as a machine, affected by external agencies and cured by external means. In last night's programme it was suggested that anxiety, and the general failure to cope with such stress, might induce the kind of physical failures associated with cancerous growth. In one small American town it seems that severe flooding has provoked four cases of leukaemia. The idea of a "cancer personality" is also part of this; one English study has concluded that cancer patients are likely to be those who in ordinary life tend to suppress emotions like anger or fear. Feelings of belplessness and rejection may also exacerbate the growth of malignant cells. It is at least conceivable that, just as the "personality" rejects anger, so the immune system may reject the knowledge of cancerous growth and thereby allow it to continue.

Of course the theories will be taken too far, and anyone who falls ill will be accused of emotional instability. And, as always. American researchers have pursued the subject with an almost obsessive concentration, killing rats and mice by the thousands and collecting bucketfuls of blood from "stressful persons" process. The danger is that their conclusions will be as vague or as unverifiable as those they have supplanted - one more set of warnings for hypochondriacs to worry about.

helped by a firmer appearance on the US bond market. The FT Index closed at its high for the day 10.9 up at 718.0.

Sime Darby Berhad raised £12.3m by placing its 3.87 million shares in Mills & Allen Shares of ICC Oil Services rose 2p to 32p on the USM yesterday - just 11/2p short of the year's high - amid hopes that the group was about to follow up its recent acquisition of London Stone from Pritchard Services with a new contract. Monday's summit meeting with several brokers has led analysis to upgrade its full year estimates.

International with institutions at 320p, a 20p discount to the market price. Rowe & Pitman handled the placing which is understood to have been snapped up.

Balancing act may tempt Treasury

It is always dangerous to dismiss lightly speculation about where the Treasury might look next to raise money, but suggestions that bank taxation is once again on the Treasury agenda need to be treated with some caution.

The official line is that any attention which it may or may not be directing at the subject is of a strictly routine nature. At this stage there is no untoward interest in reviving a special bank tax. But equally it would be wrong to say the issue had been firmly ruled

This was very much the message the last Chancellor delivered in the Budget. Sir Geoffrey Howe said at the time that tightening the tax regime on the banks would not be sensible "in the light of current circumstances.'

The "current circumstances" were of course the international debt crisis.

But those clouds are clearing and the banks so far have weathered the international debt storm. There is reason to be sceptical whether their bad debt provisions would be anything like adequate if a real crisis broke but, that apart, the banks are once again pushing up their dividends if not always their profits as the interim results show.

This itself, of course, is no justification for further levies on the banks. But then the Government has never attempted to provide any intellectual justification for the original £400m windfall tax it extracted two years ago.

When it comes to imposing taxes, expediency is a powerful motive and for this reason alone it would be foolish to write-off the possibility of another bank tax at a time when the Government is having such problems controlling spend-

And, in addition, the nature of the Treasury machine is such that it would be extremely reluctant to rule out any potential tax-raising avenue.

As to how any future tax paper by the Institute of Fiscal Studies argued strongly against the concept of special profits taxes, but advocated removing the exemption from valueadded tax on banking services. The study, spon-sored ironically by Midland Bank, said this could raise £300m directly and £400m indirectly - though it would conflict with regulations.

Oil price limit to Opec's largesse

Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, some having themselves been until fairly recently among the less developed nations, while others are still in that category, are acutely aware of the need for international development aid.

As a result Opec set up its own development aid fund and to date has loaned and donated millions of dollars to 80 countries and 40 international organiza-

Now even the oil-rich are having to reconsider their generosity and the Opec development fund 1983-84 programme is being reviewed as member countries face balance of payment problems. The spirit of co-operation and sacrifice is as strong as ever among Opec members, Mr Seyyid Abdulla, the director general of the development fund said yesterday, but the $650m earmarked for foreign aid in the next two years will have to be cut.

In any event, adds Opec, its reduction in the official marker price of crude from $34 to $29 a barel is effective aid for less developed countries.

It is up to the industrialized world to increase aid to the third world, says Opec, and although the oil exporters do not say so in such strong terms increased overseas aid by the industrialized nations would be cheaper for them than baving to return to a higher oil price, which in turn would allow Opec to increase its overseas aid

Commenting on the year to 31st March 1983, the Chairman, Sir Richard Cave said:

We have maintained a policy of investing in the Home Entertainment and high technology Engineering businesses. We responded to the strong demand throughout the year for video cassette recorders by continuing to invest heavily in rental equipment.

In Engineering, we created an Information Technology division to co-ordinate our interests in this field and to provide a platform for future growth. We have expanded and broadened the base of the Electronics business companies. Dividends Following an unchanged interim dividend of 4.05p per share an increased final dividend of 11.70p per share is recommended, making a total of 15.75p for the full year - an overall increase of 7.7%.

The Future The current year has started better than the early months of last year and the year should produce some further improvement in results. This assumes only a modest real growth in the general level of business activity and the improvement will arise mainly from action taken in earlier years to increase investment in Home Entertainment and high technology Engineering and to reduce or conserve resources elsewhere.

BMW builds on quality for future strength.

The growing world-wide demand for BMW quality has forced us to even higher performance.
The achievements of the BMW workforce speak for themselves.

Car sales rose by 8.2% to 378,000 vehicles. Turnover rose by 21.7% to over 11 billion DM. The people employed by BMW world-wide increased by 6.3% to more than 47,000. Increased profits alone allowed us to invest more than 1 billion DM, to increase dividends, and to put substantially more money into reserves. 1982 has been one of the best years for BMW in a long succession of good years. It demonstrates how the company has risen to meet our customers' expectations. World-wide success: Basis for the quality of our

The high production standard of BMW vehicles is one of the reasons for this development.

During the past four years of economic uncertainty in many major markets, BMW exports have in sales volume and market share. increas This s demand encourages us to make even .ive investments in innovative products and new production technology. The recently-introduced 3-Series demonstrates the high quality level possible and attainable today.

The future looks good. Orders taken during the first months of this year permit us to be optimistic about our 1983 results. With the clear objective of consolidating and developing our world-wide position, our investment in new technology and product quality will continue to be higher than average. Above all, BMW's success against tough international competition shows the future of BMW must remain based on a top quality product created by a secure workforce.

What is happening at Dunlop, Britain's ailing tyre giant which hates to be called an ailing tyre giant? The Office of Fair Trading has now rubber-stamped the purchase of 26 per cent of Dunlop shares by the well-connected. Malaysian well-connected company Pegi.

Two Pegi representatives were finally appointed to the Dunlop board a month ago and Dunlop is awaiting official Malaysian approval for a deal that will effectively sell half its Malaysian holdings to Pegi.

That settlement might appear to dampen short-term takeover speculation, if heightening long-er term uncertainty. But further spice is now being added by the relentless, and apparently specu-lative rush into Dunlop shares by American investors.

On Monday, Morgan Gua-ranty, which makes a business of organizing American hold-ings in London companies, announced that transatlantic sources have bought up more than 17 per cent of Dunlop, using American Depositary Receipts through nominee companies. That is 5 per cent more than a month ago - and almost all acquired in the past

If you add in the estimated 8 per cent of Dunlop flowing anonymously around the Far East in the form of bearer shares, more than half this pillar of British Industry is now held by overseas interests and a quarter by seemingly speculative holders, who, the company admits, might be only too eager to accept a full takeover bid should someone, presumably Pegi, wish to make one.

Peg, wish to make one.

At one time, American buying lifted Dunlop shares from 53p to 80p. They have since relapsed to around 62p, pricing the group at £89m where the shares yield an unimpressive 4.5 per cent. This rating is hardly justified on trading.

Pretax profits have declined every year since 1977

Since 1977, pretax profits have declined every year from £54m to a £7m loss in 1982. when the final dividend was passed. Heavy rationalization cost below the line, particularly in tyres, brought the total loss to £80m, leaving Dunlop's balance sheet uncomfortably highly geared with loans.

Dunlop has not had anything like such a bad time since the disastrous Pirelli union married 1971, effectively sepa-rated 1973, finally divorced

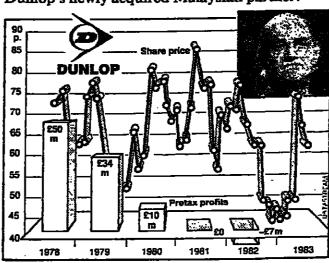

Nearly all the present trouble has been in the British and European - particularly French - tyre markets. Until the middle of 1982 it looked as though, at last, there was some recovery in these depressed markets.
But the second half of last year proved with a vengeance that this was not the case. After a first-half profit of £4m, the group lost film in the second half - almost entirely due to renewed depression in tyres.

Sandy McLachlan

Outsiders put more pressure on Dunlop

American speculators are rushing to buy the apparently unattractive shares of Dunlop, Britain's ailing tyre multinational. Will they aid a takeover, or have they misread the intentions of Dunlop's newly acquired Malaysian partner?

Sir Campbell Fraser: Malaysian alliance

British tyre division lost £13m and the French side a further £9m. It was left to Dunlop's other divisions, mainly indus-trial, consumer, and engineering, to make up some of the

The tyre market remains depressed despite the present boom in car sales. France is going through a particulary difficult time - Michelin made a loss of £354m in its latest financial year and it is unlikely, proportionately, Dunlop will have done much better.

In Britain, there has been some improvement in volume terms both in the original equipment market and the replacement market, but in each case price levels remain wor-

It is estimated that there is a 20 per cent worldwide overcapacity in the tyre market and much of the surplus is dumped in Europe. Indeed, competition within Europe is fierce: at times. currency movements have made it possible for Germanmade Dunlop tyres to undercut British-made Dunlops in Britain and the Germans have not been slow to take advantage.

Over the past few years Dunlop has cut its British tyre workforce by two-thirds to just under 4,000, but the group has forecast still further "radical restructuring" in the British and European tyre divisions, Although it has not been spelt out, this restructuring will include dropping some product lines and the loss of still more jobs.

Moves are likely to be spring, partly to keep as low a profile as possible. Dunlop's chairman, CBI president Sir Campbell Fraser, has had chairman, CBI president Sir and, indeed, the renegotiation Campbell Fraser, has had enough of a high profile over his salary increase at Dunlop at a whole 51 per cent direct from salary increase at Dunlop at a time when the group was registering record losses. In any case, the group's high gearing is not condusive to further big write-offs - at least until Dunlop's has had the cash from its deal with Pegi. Once approved by the Malaysian Foreign Investment Committee, this would put its 51 per cent shareholding in Dunlop Malaysian Industries Berhard (DMIB) into a new company which it will jointly own with Pegi.

The first step has already been taken in Ireland. The Cork-based operation has announced that there are serious doubts about its long-term viability unless it can bring in a partner and Ireland's Industrial Development Authority is try-ing to find a third party. Should it fail, speculation that the operation may fold may not be far off the mark, although Dunlop will not comment.

With tyres at least getting no worse, and better contributions from the rest of the group both by product and geographically - there is no doubt that Dunlop has done better in the first half of the present year than in the second half of last year, although it will not match the £4m before tax earned in the first half of last year.

The figures, published next group back to a near break-even position, although some analysis are still not looking for analysts are still not looking for much better than a £2m loss.

It is, therefore, American and Far Eastern promise that is sustaining the share price and, of the two, the former is the more mystifying. Dunlop has had no success in tracing the buyers through the nominees, but there are some indicators (not least from Morgan Guaranty) that point to widespread small buying rather than the purchase of a single stake.

For a start, any American

For a start, any American group wishing to buy a strategic stake would surely not be clumsy enough in execution to push the share price up by 50 per cent along the way. Second. the company has had numerous phone calls from apparently individual American shareholders wanting to know just what this company does be-cause they have bought shares

One theory about the attraction of the group in the United States is that it is a dollar stock (and Dunlop is valued at around $1 at present price and exchange rates) with a hightechnology stake in the next generation of Boeing aircraft through a contract to supply the

On the face of it, the situation in the Far East is clearer. Pegi's request for representation on the Dunlop board was reason able, given its stake in the company, and makes sense, given that the two companies are jointly to share control over DMIB.

Pegi has repeatedly assured Dunlop that it has no intention of bidding for the whole group Dunlop) was to prevent Pegi having to make an offer to outside shareholders in DMIB.

Malaysian blessing could make Dunlop more takeover prone

For Dunlop, the most pressing need now is to achieve that official approval. Not only will it receive £55m in cash denominated in nice comfortable Swiss francs, but it will realize a £24m surplus over book value which can be offset against rationalization costs (A fact which may cause unease among at least some of the 3,750 people who still work at Fort Dunlop in Birmingham).

When it comes, the Malaysian blessing will give some relief to the hard pressed balance sheet but, on the other hand, it could make the company even more takeoverprone than it is

With net assets per share of 265p a share and little chance of a Tilling-type profit forecast while the tyre market remains so depressed, Dunlop is likely to remain a takeover prospect. Indeed, the present weakness of the European tyre market. which any bidder would inherit. may be the group's strongest

Conflicts pose a mergers problem

Cecil Parkinson, Secretary of and to provide them with the State for Trade and Industry, is funds and the management for having a new look at the way rationalization and for the mergers are referred to the Monopolies Commission.

That he should make this public is no doubt a response to the embarrassing conjunction of his about-turn on the Stock Exchange case and hints that his new team would not be so capricious with Office of Fair Trading and Commission judgements.

Managers and city folk who worry about present uncertainty should not build up their hopes. The trouble is that, with their wide public interest tests, the OFT and the Commission are obliged to interpret industry policies which do not appear to exist. To clarify the guidelines would be to clarify the policy and that is not likely to happen.

- At present both the OFT, in recommending references, and the Commission, in judging them, must subconsciously adjust to changing priorities on such things as employment in the regions versus rationalization.

As previous ministers discovered, statements of policy are a hostage to events. It is much easier to allow the Commission and OFT, which aim to treat each case on its merits, to tread the narrow path between random ad hoc-ery and rigid policy-making.

Today, Britain's needs point in two, occasionally conflicting, directions. There is a strong need to make old industries and business sectors more efficient minority interests in Abbeygate and the takeover of the John Bright Group and Grainstone on Monday.

This move turns what was once a ragbag of companies based on the Peel Mills into a property development group specializing in free standing retail developments. The group has a planned development programme amounting to £19m, about £12m of which is store schemes.

At the heart of this expansion is Mr Peter Jevans, joint managing director of Abbeygate Securities and on the main board of the group.

Under the enlarged group, after the issue of 5.8m new Peel shares worth £12.5m at 210p a share, Peel will have net assets of £22.3m, the equivalent of 269p a share. The directors are forecasting profits of £1.05m for the current year to March

All development is funded internally through medium-term loans. The group has outstanding borrowings of £4.5m although this is expected to rise to £14m.

When shares were suspended in June the middle market quotation was 215p, a higher han average 25 per cent discount on the new estimated asset value of 269p. On this basis investors must express a degree of caution, but Peel's involvement almost entirely in the retail market probably has greater chance of long-term growth than companies developing suburban and provin-cial office buildings.

The luck of the draw gives necessary intrigue to three out of four of the NatWest Trophy quarter-finals to be played today (Wed). The meeting of Gloucestershire and Hampshire, for example, would be less well balanced if it were to be played at Southampton rather than Bristol.

As it is, Gloucestershire deserve

As it is Gloucestershire deserve some fortune, not least because of the haphazard manner in which they went out of the Benson and Hedges Cup (did Graveney keep the coin which settled their fate?). Their opponents, who have yet to reach a Lord's final, may well have been the side they wanted to face at the time of the draw. Whether that will still be the case after their trials of the last three days is another matter. Hampshire, at the moment look pretty formidable. Greenidge and Smith cannot stop scoring runs, and Marshall cannot stop wanting the ball. It is like a drug to him. They are three good reasons why Gloucestershire will be hard pressed to win, unless of course Zaheer outshines them like he outshone Gower in the previous round at

And so to Canterbury, scene of yet another cup-tie. This one, between Kent and Warwickshire, would, it seems, have been better calanced had it been played at uscie. Middlesex are, of course, the Edgbaston.

Kent, however, have problems with injuries: Dilley will be given a pain-killing injection this morning to determine whether he is fit. In New Zealand's second innings on Monday he bowled despite a bruised beel. Brian Luckhusrst, Kent's manager, is aware that if he plays today, his chances of being fit for the Lord's Test next week will be diminished. It is one of those club versus country dilemmas that have Middlesex are, of course, the most successful team in the country at present, and are favourites to win this trophy. They are, though, still without Butcher. Today Emburey looks likely to bat at No 5 – a tribute to how his batting has improved, but not, perhaps, to the strength of the middle-order.

Sussex, who play Somerset at Hove, will be without le Roux, their South African fast hower, who has South African fast bowler, who has been told to rest for the rest of the versus country dilemmas that have bedevilled football managers. Warwickshire had lost three wickets by lunch, those of David Smith, Lloyd and Amiss. The score was 103. Yet in the afternoon Kallicharran and Humpage went so serenly for a time that I was beginning to think in terms of a draw and a 5.30 finish. There was not much wrong with the pitch, except the slight wear that you expect on a third day in mixed weather. Then Hughes broke the partnership, with a yorker to Humpage at 166. Middlesex at once crowded the bat for the tall, nervous-looking young Dyer, but hooked a bigger fish when Kallicharran mistimed an off-drive at Emburey and was caught. He had played a beautiful innings, but after he went. Warwickshire were reduced to hesitant defence.

At half past three the rain stopped play, but tea was taken and little time was lost. At four o' clock they were out again, but only for an over or so. A Warwicksbire family sitting near me cheered and clapped the rain, with Midlands realism. It was about the last thing they had to applaud. Play began again after 20 minutes, and Warwickshire collapsed dismally under and onslaught from Daniel. Emburey, though, had Hampshire, on the verge of their fourth successive win, could scarcely have had a more frustrating day. Once or twice, despite losing ball. It was their fifth success in the It was their into success in the county championship, sponsored by Schweppes, and in its way splendidly conceived and timed. Cook, the captain, can take a bow. In the first place he had shown foresight and fortitude in making his destantion, 72 cross behind. In his declaration 73 runs behind. In reply Neale would be obliged to give a satisfactory answer.

Neale's decision when it came was desperately close to being too late, or so it seemed, for Worcestershire had butted on to make 225 for out and Neale 52 not out before declaring and that left Northamptonshire with a challenging mountain to climb, 299 runs in 160

That meant runs in the region of six an over. Cook's intent was loud and clear and left us in no doubt, and crear and sent us in no doubt, and that came as a mighty relief, for previously we had been weighed down with worry and were fast becoming despondent at the thought of one of those dull, demoralizing

Cook's gallantry as he cut and lunged with his rapier tended to outshine Larkins plundering broad-sword but, after Cook had helped put on 52 for the first wicket, Larkins assumed total command in a punishing display of clean hitting.

blow in the wind By John Wilcockson

When rain halted the qualifying round of the amateur 4,000 metres pursuit at the national track chamoionships in Leicestershire yesterday the fastest time had been set by Malcolm Elliott, from Sheffield, the double Common-wealth Games road champion. His time of 4min 59.141sec made him the only one of the 95 starters under five minutes, and was excellent in the windy conditions.

Elliott returned to track racing only last weekend, and as a warm-up to the pursuit he started in the one kilometre time-trial on Monday night. His time of Imin I lsec placed him immediately behind three acknowledged experts at this specialist discipline. The winner, who gained his second national title of the championship week, was Shaun Wallace from Southampton, a student at Nottingham University Wallace's relatively slow time of 1min 9.588sec emphasized the problems caused by unpleasant weather. It was just a fraction too fast for Mark Barry.

The major surprise of Monday's rain-delayed session was the defeat of the world road race champion, Mandy Jones, in the women's 3,000 metres pursuit by a tecnager, Barbra Collins from Lincoln. But Miss Jones was unruffled by her defeat. The difference was that Barbra had prepared for it, and I hadn't", she said. "It we had raced on Sunday, as was scheduled, perhaps I would have done better. But on Sunday night we got flooded out at the camp site, and before the final I had a little accident in the car park, and

In the final Jones had started as fast as usual, but she had no reply to fast as usual, but she had no reply to the smooth-pedalling Collins. "She just goes faster and faster," said Miss Jones. "In contrast. I reach a plateau and can't get any faster." On Monday night Jones's plateau was not quite high enough, and she suffered her first pursuit defeat by a British rider in four years.

Americans run adrift in murky water

With only one day and two half-course races remaining in the elimination series preliminary round to produce a challenger in the America's Cup at Newport, Rhode Island, that historic competition is living up to its reputation for controversy. The New York Yacht Club (NYYC), if they cannot find a rule to snooker the opposition, are prepared to invent once and the Brits once again cannot seemingly make up their minds who shall be chiefs and who Indians.

The former situation finds the British firmly aligned behind the Australians in calling the Americans cads while the latter has the more neutral and objective Americans wondering how we ever got ourselves organized enough to win the war (the one where they were on our side). In between the two controversies Peter de Savary's quiet smile of optimism remains as wide as Rhode Island Sound.

The carefully stage-managed yet none the less clumsy release of a private letter from the commodore of the New York YC attempting to discredit the legality of the design of Australia II, emphatic leader of the elimination series so far, if not actually tohave her disquali-fied because of her innovative keel, clearly demonstrates the anxiety of the Americans that they may, after 130 years, finally surrender the trophy the regulations will be masts, which is worth many millions and then sails. If they open that which is worth many millions to US yachting in general and the folk of Newport in particu-

The fact that the six other boat Azzura are made by North, challenging syndicates have unanimously supported the legitimacy of Australia II, thereby putting the ball firmly back in the American court, back in the American court, and the American court, back in the American court, back does not by any means indicate aller is one of the three shat the affair is over. among the challengers is which four will contest the semi-finals in which the boats start from scratch, "a whole new regatta" as de Savary put it yesterday. He claims that their new Proctor mast, specially light-ened, will make a significant difference", giving Victory '83 a five or 10 per cent improvement. Meanwhile the controversy over the helming of the British boat continues. Yesterday Phil Crebbin was back in the after-guard alongside Lawrie Smith for the first race of the critical final four, against Challenge 12. This meant that Smith's partnership with Rodney Pattisson, successful against Canada two days ago after a disastrous start, has one again been discarded. It is becoming increasingly apparent, however, that the rest of the crew are split more or less evenly on whether Partisson or Crebbin should be sharing the helm with Smith. It is regarded as imperative by many of those with experience on the sidelines that de Savary must now make a decision on his first choice for he semi-final round. As one of the squad said recently:

"The difference on the boat is between the more extrovert rebels, and those who really want to think about it. There are some people on the boat who regrettably have now contributed as much as they might have."

Smith and Pattisson have made no secret of their preference for each other, and it is also apparent to the careful observer that Crebbin, one of the best starting belmsmen in the competition with a highly intelligent approach to match racing, is hardly overwhelmed by his popularity among the

One of the squad said yesterday: "Up till now it has been possible to justify the interchanging of helmsmen but now it is necessary to make a decision. I think de Savary knows this too, but whether he's prepared to we shall have to wait and see." Reaching for the key to Florida

GOLF

By John Hennessy Golf Correspondent

Three young men reached out yesterday for the £1,000 prize that goes with the national assistants' championship, sponsored by Foot-Joy, at Coombe Hill. They were Gary Coles, of St George's Hill, Bryan Lewis, of Panshanger, and Ian Grant, of Orsett, all with 71, one over par for the 6,256-yard Surrey course. Their horizons are wider, however, for the tournsment, resuscitated after a lapse of a couple of decades in a more authoritative form, carries also the entrée to the world assistants' championship in Florida

Lewis, the first man to strike a ball yesterday, became the first man to set the standard. He comes from Nick Faldo country, Welwyn Garden City and would have occupied Faldo's usual position this year - in spendid isolation at the top - if it had not been for five at the last.

The main difficulty of the hole, only 390 yards, is that one plays from a valley on to an invisible green. Lewis, in his own words, "quit on the shot" and dragged it into a bunker, whence he came out well short. Thus the delight he derived from a six-iron to 10ft for a two at the previous hole was shortlived. On reflection he no doubt has good cause to be satisfied with his final score.

Coles, son of Neil, played well as belits a man who came to Coombe Hill hard on a victory in one of the Open championship qualifying tournaments. However, he had little success on the greens, brought to superb condition by expert greenkeeping. Coles had one bad hole, the fifth, where a snap hook off the tee planted him among the trees and destroyed his caddie, or so he says, since he could not otherwise have got away with 26 putts. Another distinguished offspring, Duncan Muscroft, had a disastrous round of 82.

Dutch ban on golfers

The Hague (Reuter) - The Dutch tennis and motor cycle events. Government have banned 15 South South African players were also African golfers from the Dutch refused entries for the Scandinavian African golfers from the Dutch Open championship, which starts in Zandvoort tomorrow. The govern-ment last momb refused a visa for the South African golfer, Ian Palmer, and said the refusal would also apply to any other applications by South African golfers.

The government have asked all Dutch sporting organizations to avoid contacts with South Africa. A foreign ministry spokesman said the visa applications were refused first because they were South African sportsmen, and secondly because no world championship points were at stake in the tournament. South South Africans have recently been allowed resheeds entry for the Dutch grand prix gramme.

Open in Sweden last month, and the Tunisian Open in April

In Johannesburg, the South African PGA tournament director, Dennis Bruyns, said the Association would hold talks next week with officials of the European tour on the ban. "At the moment, they are ready to act if a golfing body differentiates against us, but it seems there is not much they can do if a government refuses us visas,"

He said the bans would mean South Africans would have to resheedule their touring pro-turnament here last year but has now developed an aggressive game built around a strong topspin forehand. It was good enough to beat Miss Sukova, 18, who is rated twenty third in the world.

Mis Benjamin, who is fifty first in the world, had lost the only previous meeting between the two but that was on grass in Australia last

Miss Benjamin came back from 2-5 in the first set. She saved a set point in the ninth game and went on to win four straight games for a 6-5 lead. Miss Sukova held service after two deuces to force the set into the tiebreak. The American took quick control, winning the first five points and taking it 7-3.

The second set was almost identical as the Czechoslovak took a 5-3 lead. Miss Benjamin broke service in the ninth game but then lost her srvice and the set at 15-40

Murray plea on FT strike today

By Barrie Clement Labour Reporter

Mr Len Murray, general secretary of the TUC, will today make a personal plea to the leaders of the National Graphical Association for a return to work at the strike-bound Finan-

Mr Murray is due to go to Bedford to confront the execu-tive of the NGA, the union at the centre of the nine-week stoppage, which is threatened with expulsion from the TUC. He will tell them that not only is his personal reputation

at stake, but also the image of the labour movement.

Mr Murray underwrote an independent mediator's report which the union said that it would "respect". But the docu-nient endorsed the management's offer of £304-a-week for the 24 machine minders at the centre of the dispute, and the union refused to accept it. Th TUC general council last week formally advised the NGA to resume work and the union's national council is today discussing its response.

Mr Murray will tell the print union leaders that, if they do not accept the peace formula. they will probably be expelled from the movement tomorrow by the general council of the

NGA sources were yesterday predicting that Mr Murray's personal plea will be of no avail and that the union is already looking to the full TUC Congress next month to reverse any general council decision to

Meanwhile, the company's plans to produce the normal European edition of the paper in Frankfurt without the NGA have gained little support.

Mr William Keys, general secretary of Sogat '82, a rival print union, says the TUC would have to add to its expulsion order a recommendation that the other unions cooperate with the management's plans.

Even then the idea would have to be considered in the light of the NGA's threat that it would "close Fleet Street" if other workers broke the strike. Mr Alan Hare, FT chairman and chief executive, said that if there was no agreement to produce a non-NGA paper by the end of this week, there would be lay-offs.

Steadying management's hand.

away in a day or two unless someone is there to find them."

Dr Norman said that there was concern about the long-term future of the fossilized

"The University Museum at Stuttgart in West Germany has a large fund for buying foreign fossils and it is possible it would be prepared to offer a lot of money for a dinosaur like this - many thousands of pounds."

He had told Mr Chase that the Oxford museum would buy the Iguanodon and display it. "We can only offer him £900 by comparison to the big guns of Sturtgart.

"It is so important that we would put it on display here. If it went to Stuttgart it would just be stuck in a drawer and conserved to be available for research. We are hoping to persuade Nick that to have £900 and have it displayed is worth more than having it disappear to Snutgart."

Some British fossil collectors were already said to have sold parts of collections to the West Germans, he said.

Fossil hunter on the dole makes find of a lifetime discovery of the Iguanodon came about in the simplest of ways when Mr Nicholas Chase was strolling along an Isle of Wight beach. He noticed what looked like a bone protruding from part of the cliff face which had substantial excavation and reassembling exercise during which Mr Chase spent hours collapsed. Moments later, he was holding part of the back of an animal which died about 120 of bones which could add million years ago.

The discovery led to a and gluing bits together like a jigsaw. The result is a collection himself in the world of years ago and ponder what life might have been in an earlier age.

Mr Chase is a typical fossil hammering away with chisels hunter, quiet and shy, who likes

He opted for that particular branch of palaeontology two years ago. Before that, his hobby experiments had taken him to astronomy.

Mr Chase left East Anglia University two years ago with nothing to look forward to but unemployment. Today life is different with the knowledge of his find and the possibility that he may soon have a job. But there are still two problems confronting him.

The first is that the skeleton of the dinosaur is not complete. the remaining bones could be lying on the beach at the whim of the tide or the attention of amateur palaeontologists.

He says that he has not been able to carry on his work this summer because of the number of tourists, and fears that if the site is publicized the collection will be put at risk.

The second problem is what to do with his find and whether to accept any money for it.

Dr William Ball, Keeper of Palacontology at the Natural History Museum, said last night that if the dinosaur had been found on the beach he would consider the finder to be the

Coe says illness may end his career

feeling so tired that he can hardly climb the stairs, that it is difficult for him to know whether he is feeling "sermal"

But when on Sunday he ran the perfectly judged 800 and made his familiar attack on the final bend, only to finish fourth and looking as if he were running in soft sand, then the full force of his private nightmare could no longer be ignored. The truth was, as in the European championships in Athens last year, that his body had lost the ability to reproduce past extravagances, and had no hope of recovering in time for Helsinki.

"Of course it hurts when younger runners like Elliott are suddenly going past you, and on Sunday I knew that all arguments about tactics were now enapty."

When, two weeks ago, he withdrew from the Helsinki 1,500 metres race, he still considered that he would be in sufficient form to justify himself over 800 metres in Finland. After all, he had run the world's fastest time of the year, 1:43.80, in Oslo only a few weeks ago, and even at less than his best had still surely to be the favourite. Had he not been cleared by the hospital on his last blood checkup last April, had he not had fortnightly tests for several months after glandular fever was diagnosed after his defeat in Athens last August?

He said yesterday: "Two weeks ago I began to wonder about my condition. My preparation had not been all it should have been because of a stomach strain, and I decided with Peter to cut right back on training, just to keep sharp and fast, because even in comparison with past experience I was feeling more tired than I should

"I spent several days feeling reasonable, and then had a spell feeling rough. I suppose things until you actually come to a grinding halt, yet compared with the seasons of 1980-81, you could say I have not felt totally well since July 1982."

The hurt of the past two days lies not only in the end of the ambition to win the major 800 metres race which had alreded metres race which had eluded him in Prague, Moscow and then Athens. It is, without doubt, the end of the love affair with his favourite event, the onhe regards as the perfect combination of sprinting ability and stamina.

"I feel very upset", he said.
"As far as the 800 metres goes, the game is up. Heisinki would have been my swansong.

"I have been obliged to walk away from an event which I did not believe I had yet fully explored, and I believe that when fit I have still reached nowhere near my potential over 1.500 metres."

The other burt has been the behaviour of some of those once regarded as friends, who, hours before the announcements of his iliness became public, were denigrating him as a has-been.

Looking forward to the Olympic Games in Los Angeles, Coe said: "Whether I would run the 1,500 or the 5,000 metres would all depend on what the succidiets have to on what the specialists have to say, what they consider might be the body's reaction to moving up to the endurance demands of the longer race. We will just have to wait and see.

For the moment, all they will say is that when I come out at the end of this week I must cut back on the tennis!"

It will be a tragedy if we have seen the best of Sebastian Coc already, for he is only 26 and should be in his prime, as Peter Saell was when he did the Olympic double in 1964. But Coe has been running a cricket pitch length faster than Suell and there is no knowing what that effort bas done to so frail a frame. Those who have been thrilled by all that has gone before must now wish him well.

The Daily Mirror comments:
"What the Labour Party needs even more urgently than a new leader is someone who will force it to face reality. Mr Shore deserves the credit for trying to do that."
